DISTRICT NO. TWO OPERATORS REJECT CLEVELAND PACT

Operators Want to Resume Work Under Old Agreement Instead Of The Cleveland Terms.

MEETING TODAY

Altoona, Aug 22.—Central Coal Association offiecrs yesterday rejected theCleveland agreement in conference with miners of District No. 2. The counter proposals submitted by the operators providing for resumption of work during the negotiations was refused by the miners. Adjournment was taken until today.

The convention of operators and miners for the Central Pennsylvania field, in session at Altoona since Monday, is in a veritable deadlock. A sub-scale committee of seven from each side battled all morning without result and after a short adjournent resumed their session at 2 o'clock and are still battling.

These committees are as follows:

For the operators.—B. M. Clark, Charles T. O'Neil, Webb Shillingford, J. R. Caseley, C. B. Maxwell, Rembrandt Peale and J. William Wetter.

For the miners.—John Brophy. James Mark, Richard Gilbert, Harry Crago, Stanley Hudzinski, Herman Carletti and Reno Glazioni.

The executive boards of the two associations of operators, comprised the scale committee which met the mine comittee, headed by John Brophy. At this first meeting the miners offered a resolution providing for acceptance of the Cleveland agreement, and it was rejected by the operators, who offered instead that mine officials order a resumption of work under conditions of Rule 25, pending joint negotiations. Rule 25, adopted at Philadelphia, April 26, 1920, by operators and miners, provides that if no new scale agreementis signed before March 31, 1922, all men in mihes shall continue at work at old scale for 30 days, a fter the date of the first meeting to negotiate a scale to succeed the old scale.

The resolution was rejected by the mine workers and an adjournment taken until Tuesday. Having taken part in the Cleveland conference the Pennsylvahia Coal & Coke company is not represented at Altoona and these operations are working. Other mines in the district have gone to work and this fact causes more or less confusion, throughout the field.

Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.—Peace in the Illinois coal fields is only a question of a few hours, it was learned here today. The committee of six finished its work shortly before noon and returned a report to individual meeting of the miners and operators. Unless there is a bolt in the miners or operators meetings the agreement will be signed today, one of the committee of six declared. Following the individual meetings the committee will meet again. The agreement will then be referred to a joint conference.

Washington, D. C. Aug. 22.—Fuel production in Pennsylvania will be increased 20 to 30 per cent by the last of this week, Fuel Distributor Spencer said today. A member of the Federal Fuel Commission who has just returned from the Pennsylvania fields reported today that there would be a resumption of operation in the Pennsylvania fields generally. At the same time Spencer pointed out that nearly half of the coal output of the country is mined in Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 22.—The question of fixing a fair price for coal will be the principal question before the meeting of the commission here today. The meeting called by Chairman Ainey for 3 o'clock this afternoon will be the third meeting of the full commisison and the first one to take up directly the thorny price-

Washington, D. C., Aug. 22.—Railroad executives must accept defeat on the seniority issue if the walk-out of shop workers is to be settled, one of the leading labor figures in the strike told the United Press today. Unless the rail heads are prepared to accept the shopmens' demands for restoration of seniority rights the peace conference of brotherhood leaders and rail executives in New York tomorrow will be futile, he said.

This determined stand on the part of the strikers, the demand of the eastern railroad executives, for a fight to the finish, and the call issued for financial and moral support of the shopmen's strike by the other unions has caused administration leaders to lose the hope they had for an early settlement of the dirpute.

TWO BOYS MISSING

Search is being made throughout this section for two boys who disappeared from their homes in Osceola on Friday last. The boys are William Bizub, aged 13 years, light hair, small for his age, barefooted when he left home. He was clad in blue overalls, shirt and litte hat with Octagon flour ad on it. The other lad is Herbert Nicholson, aged 16. He wore a white cap and white shirtwaist and rode a bicycle.

Information as to the whereabouts of the lads will be thankfully received by William Bilzub, of Osceola Mills.

GIVES ADDRESS ON TAXATION BEFORE COMMERCIAL CLUB

By special request, Attorney James P. O'Laughlin appeared before about sixty members of the Commercial Club last evening to give his address on "Taxation," which he delivered to the Rotary Club some time ago. Mr. O'Laughlin gave an especially lucid and enlightening exposition of our methods of taxation, pointing out their defects; and best of all, the remedy for the ills.

There is a State-wide agitation now for a revision of our system of taxation, based not alone on the complaint that our taxes are too large, but on the inequality of our taxation methods. There is every indication that there will be considerable activity along this line in the near future and The Progress hopes to be able to give more information on the topic as it develops.

POTATO GROWERS OF STATE WILL MEET ON FRIDAY

Clearfield County Spud Growers Should Fall in Line With Others And Help Erect Hospital.

ALL DAY SESSION

The largest group of farmers to meet together in one spot in this grand old State of ours, is expected, on the 25th of August, at the Pennsylvania State College, when the potato growers of the State will meet and break ground for the new hospital that will be erected by funds donated by the potato growers from each county of the State.

Last year, your State College, the only State Institution of higher learning in the State, and depending entirely on State funds for maintenance, turned away over one thousand boys and girls from its doors, because of lack of room. A deplorable fact to say the least. It was this condition that started the movement, by the alumnae and friends of the college, to raise, by public subscription, two millions of dollars this fall. The potato men of the State quickly grasped the idea of erecting a hospital as their share of the campaign To say the hospital is needed is putting it mildly, when we know the facts. With over three thousand students enrolled, the present hospital facilities are only six cots in a little hut at the edge of the town, to accommodate and take care of the sick. What would be the result if an epidemic broke out?

Pledges have already been sent in-

MINERS RETURN TO WORK AT CAMPBELL CREEK OPERATIONS

Charleston, West Va., Aug. 22.—Four hundred union miners marched into the pits of the Campbell Creek Coal Company, near here, at daybreak today resuming operations which had been suspended since the strike began April 1st. The spectre of famine which for months has haunted the shanties of the district faded as the workers began their feverish efforts to help replenish the nation's coal supply. Pale faced women and children, worn from a summer of marked suffering, smiled from their shanty doors as the army of peace marched by. They were waiting for the first pay check which will mean food and plenty.

FRAMING MEASURE TO PREVENT COAL FROM ROCKETING

Washington, D. C, Aug. 22.—A new law to curb coal profiteering is being framed by Administration Cabinet members at the suggestion of President Harding. Several plans have been submitted to Attorney General Daugherty and he is expected to confer with Secertaries Hoover and Davis today in an effort to find a satisfactory measure. Unexpected legal difficulties are upsetting the attempt to provide Federal supervision of fuel prices.

SECOND FLOOR OF HOTEL CLARIDGE CRASHES TO ST.

New York, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Twelve workmen were crushed and injured today when the second floor of the Hotel Claridge on Broadway at 44th Street crushed to the street level. The hotel is being rebuilt and was vacant at the time of the accident. Steel beams gave way and with a roar that shook the bright-light district where thoasands of sight-seerers and pedestrians were crowded in the street the floor caved in.

DOLLAR DAY NEXT FRIDAY EVENT OF GREAT MOMENT TO SHOPPERS

Clearfield's remarkable bargain event—the semi-annual recurrence of Dollar Day—is scheduled for next Friday, August 25th, and every live merchant in the town is preparing for the greatest merchandising event in the history of this good old town.

These dollar day occassions are looked forward to by the patrons of Clearfield stores as real money saving events, and that this is so is due entirely to the spirit in which our merchants regard these semi-annual events. Each one has been much better and more successful than the one which preceded it, while Friday's Dollar Day, from our knowledge of present conditions and arrangements, will far eclipse anything thus far attempted along this line.

Read the announcements of the different merchants regarding their offerings upon Dollar Day and you will agree with us that the occasion this time means real worth-while bargains and many of them.

Watch this paper for further announcements. It will mean much to every careful buyer.

DETECTIVES AGAIN VISIT CLEARFIELD IN ROBBERY CASE

New York Central Railroad Detective, Harold Fisher, and City Detective James Kucera, of Cleveland, who are working on the case against Lee R. Linsenbigler and Sherwood Kramer, formerly of Clearfield, and Lake Shore Engineer Jones and former Railroad Detective Yeager, arrested at Cleveland on Sunday, August 13th, charged with wholesale robbery of freight cars in the New York Central yards at Elyria and Cleveland, came back to Cleanfield yesterday and with Constable Lee Sunderland spent the time up till noon today in an effort to locate more of the stolen merchandise, which they thought might be here. They secured a search warrant from 'Squire Chorpenning for the store of August Marano in the Fourth Ward but a careful search of the premises failed to discover anything at all and Mr. Marano was absolved of all suspicion in the matter by the detectives, who were convinced that he had no connection whatever with the affair.

Denies He Stole Automobiles.

Detective Kucera, in conversation with a Progress representative, said he had a long talk with Linsenbigler in the Cleveland jail regarding the alleged stolen automobiles which were sold here. Linsenbigler denied having stolen them or knowing they were stolen. He said he purchased his Buick car in 1919 from George Helms, of Cleveland, and sold it to another man in Ohio, whom he did

BALKY FORD BURNS UP RATHER THAN GO TO HOUTZDALE, PA.

Jimmy Bishop started for Houtzdale this morning in a balky Ford. The Henry spit, spat and sputtered going down through East End and tried by every way known to a recalcitrant flivver to "take the bit in its teeth." Jimmy however with a firm hand held the Henry in the straight and narrow path until the Kurtz farm was reached. Here the Ford became so unruly that the driver was forced to turn the plagued old thing about and start back for town.

As was to be expected Jimmy was pretty darned hot, but the Henry was hotter, and every time the former unbosomed himself and let loose a flood of the sulphurous things in his heart against all Fords, and this one in particular, the flivver would hump its back while its blushes would fairly melt the few remaining scales of enamel off its rusty fenders. Finally human nature and the Ford could stand it no longer and just opposite the Sewer Pipe Works both burst into flames, but Jimmy was on top; and it was a good thing he was A sheet of flame enveloped his feet and running gears and with a yell that would have done credit to a Comanche Indian in the "old west" Jimmy hopped out of that old boat and allowed her to run her nose into the bank where the flames rapidly eat out her cantankerous life and everything else about her while Jimmy danced about the funeral pyre in glee—after he had doused the fire that was rapidly climbing up his pants legs.

The Ford is a complete wreck but Jimmy has about recovered.

GREAT YEAR AHEAD FOR HUNTERS SAYS SECTY. GORDON

Preliminary Survey Of Game Shows Big Increase In All Kinds Of Game In This State.

BEARS INCREASE

Harrisburg, Aug. 22. (U. P.)—The most successful hunting season in many years in Pennsylvania was predicted for the coming fall by Secretary Seth Gordon of the Game Commission today based on reports from game officials in every section of the State.

While the forecast depended on weather and food conditions, Gordon said sportsmen had every reason to expect an unusually favorable season. Gordon stressed the need of cooperation on the part of hunters, especially in the way of conservative killing of ruffed grouse and no killing of spike bucks.

The estimates of conditions for the various principal kinds of game were as follows:

"Deer.—Deer have increased very rapidly throughout the entire State through the establishment of new refuges and re-stocking sections that were looked upon as entirely "shot out," and will supply good deer hunting this year. The old established deer territory of the State will furnish better sport than ever. The total kill for 1922 may reach 7,000 bucks, if weather conditions are favorable, which would be an increase of approximately 2,000 over the 1921 season.

Elk.—Elk seem to be increasing in several sections of the State, although continually causing considerable annoyance to property owners in other portions of the State.

Bear.—Reports indicate that bears

HUG, KISS, $1,000.00, JUST LIKE A DREAM, FIND THE WOMAN

Chicago, Aug. 22.—A hearty kiss, a surreptitious hug, $1,000 in small bills—all from a beautiful lady rivaling the dreams of poets.

And then the lady disappeared.

But if the lady doesn't appear, Nicholas J. Hoffman, an ex-service man, may go to prison, possibly die, for he has already been in five government hospitals.

Hoffman was arrested charged with having stolen an automobile. The ex-service man says he bought the car with $1,000 given him by the aforementioned beautiful lady.

"On the night of July 20," says he, "I was at Ardmore Beach. Suddenly I heard a scream. It came from a beautiful young lady dressed in a one-piece bathing suit. As she went down for the third time I jumped in and rescued her."

She did not reveal her name, continues Hoffman, but asked him to meet her at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, where she would reward him. This she did, giving him $1,000, the kiss and the hug.

Now, as the French say: "Find the woman."

FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS:—

The Child Lover Stories.

By A Lover of Boys and Girls.

"A WEE LITTLE BABY"

After Mary passed the happy time thinking about becoming the Mama of the Child Lover, one night a most wonderful thing happened. What do you think it was? There was laid in her arms the sweetest little baby. He was her own dear little baby. She knew this was the Child Lover and her heart was happier than ever. The baby was so little and so cute. He was her very own to love and care for. And she would take the very best care of Him for her Heavenly Father. The beautiful Mother cuddled Him up close to her heart. She sang to Him. She thanked her Heavenly Father that she could now be His helper in caring for the Child Lover.

Over the hills where the baby Child Lover was in His Mother's arms, a beautiful star was shining very, very brightly. It seemed to say to everybody, "Come and see the Child Lover as a wee little baby. When you see Him, you will love Him."

Over in a field, some shepherds were asleep. They were staying with their flocks of sheep during the night. A bright light woke them. They were frightened by it. But a voice said to them," Do not be afraid. The light will not hurt you. I have a wonderful message for you. The Child Lover has come. He is a wee little baby in His Mother's arms right now. Over him and His beautiful mama a bright star is shining. You may go to see Him."

Then lots and lots of angels came. It looked as if Heaven was full of them and they wanted to let the shepherds know how glad they were to tell the wonderful news. And they were singing. How beautifully they sang! This was their song." The glory of the Heavenly Father is now in the Child Lover, who is the wee baby. Through this Child Lover everybody will learn to love everybody else. And the Heavenly Father will be very much pleased. For there will be the peace of love on the earth." Then the shepherds saw the angels go away, but the angels' song kept ringing in the ears of the shepherds.

The shepherds said to each other that they ought to go see the Child Lover of whom the angels sang. They looked for the bright star. They saw it. And as they followed it, they came to a place where they began to look for the wee little baby. They were not long looking and they were just as happy as they could be for they saw the beautiful Mother with the wee little baby held close to her heart. They knew this was the Child Lover. How glad they were that they had come to see Him. They loved Him as the star seemed to say they would. And as we boys and girls think of the wee little Child lover, we love Him too; don't we?

They told the Mother about the angels. They bowed their heads before the baby Child Lover and worshipped Him. They thanked the Father in Heaven for what He had done for Boys and girls in sending Child Lover as a wee little baby. So with their hearts full of joy they went back to their sheep they had left in the field.

The beautiful Mother had wonderful thoughts in her heart about the dear little baby she loved more than ever. The more she looked into His face the more her heart was filled with joy. How happy every boy and girl may be today, because the Child Lover was once a wee little baby.

so far as possible parents are requested to see that their children get to and from the park as a matter of saftey, as members of the organization cannot assume this responsibility. However, means will be provided for those children who have no other way to go but by jitney.

A number of ladies will be at entrance of park to take the children to the play ground and will be cared for from 10:30 o'clock till noon.

Bands and orchestra and the 200 choristers will entertain the crowd from 10:30 until evening.

Tuesday evening Aug. 22 will be the final rehearsal for the big choir and we want that this be a rehearsal worthy of the efforts that have been put forth and that Prof Shaffer may be honored with the attendance of over 200.

Your boys and girls have, or may spend four years at this place in the future. The potato men will not be asked to contribute anything further towards the two million dollar campaign fund, and it is sincerely hoped that the potato growers of Clearfield county will respond to this great cause as liberally as they can.

Whether you are able to contribute to this fund at once, or whether you pledge some in the future, or do not see fit to either give or pledge, we do hope that you will find it possible to attend the meeting, on the 25th, and have a chance to look over your State institution, and find out for yourself what it is, and what it means to the people of the State.

have increased quite rapidly. The provisions relative to killing bears in Potter county during 1921 will continue during 1922. This means any individual may kill an unlimited number of bears in Potter county during the open season, or he may kill a bear in any other county in the state and still go to Potter county and kill any number.

Rabbits.—Killing off thousands of weasels, foxes, and wild cats has helped the rabbits materially. Reports from all over the State indicate that rabbits are more plentiful than for many years past.

Wild turkeys.—Reports indicate that these birds are increasing. The hatching and rearing season was quite favorable and there will be fully as many or more turkeys in most sections of the State than last season.

Ruffed grouse.—Reports indicate this "king of American game birds" is again gradually increasing thruout the State. In some sections they were so reduced in numbers about 1917 that no perceptible increase has been noted, but with careful protection and continued conservative killing on the part of the sportsmen and keeping out forest fire, the ruffed grouse will again become fairlry plentiful and supply good shooting for many years to come.

Ring neck pheasants. — Ring-neck pheasants are apparently increasing in many sections of the State.

Quail.—Of the 31,600 quail stocked since 1915, more than 25,000 of these birds were stocked during the past two springs. Reports indicate that quail are found almost everywhere throughout the lower half of the State.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After eight years of married life, MARK SABRE comes to realize that he is neither understood by his prosaic and snobbish wife, MABEL, nor by his colleagues in the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre. A promised partnership in the business has been denied him and promised to TWYNING, a jealous associate. Suddenly an old sweetheart, NONA, now the wife of the dashing LORD TYBAR, returns after two years of travel. Mabel becomes jealous of Nona, who visits Sabre at his office. Sabre suspects that Nona is not happy with Tybar. In the conversation in the office Sabre realizes that Nona can give him the sympathy and understanding that he craves.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Clearly, as it were yesterday, he remembered the day she had declared to him her choice. In the Cathedral cloisters. Walking together. And suddenly, in the midst of indifferent things, she told him, "I say, Marko, I'm going to marry Lord Tybar."

And his reply, the model of indifference. "Are you, Nona?"

He came upon the picture of himself alone with Nona—alone with her watching her beautiful face—and saying to her, "Look here, there were three things you said, three expressions you used. Explain them, Nona. Explain 'There!' with your glove off. Explain 'Flotsam.' Explain 'Well, I had to come.' Explain them, Nona—for God's sake."

CHAPTER V

I

BUT it was October before he asked her to explain them. The Tybars, as he learnt when he next met her, a week after her visit to the office, were only at Northrepps for a breathing space after their foreign tour. Through the summer they were going the usual social round, ending in Scotland. Back in October for the shooting, and wintering there through the hunting season.

There was the occasion of a little dinner party at Northrepps to which he had come with Mabel; Major Hopscotch Millet and one or two others were among the guests.

Nona came with them to the door on their departure. Sabre was just down the steps. "Well, I shan't see you again till October," she said.

"No, till October." He had no more than touched her hand and turned away.

She was close behind him. He heard her give the tiniest little catch at her breath. She said, "Shall I write to you, Marko?"

He turned towards her. She was smiling as though it was a chatting remark she had made. Her shield!

And he answered her from behind his own shield, "Oh, well, I'm bad at letters, you know."

But their eyes met with no shields before them; and she was wounded, for he just caught her voice as he went down the steps, "Oh, Marko, do write to me!"

He got into the cab. Major Millet had taken the seat next to Mabel.

As the horse turned, Mabel inquired, "What was Lady Tybar talking to you about all that time?"

He said, "Oh, just saying goodbye."

But he was thinking, "That's a fourth question: Why did you say 'Oh, Marko, do write to me!' Or was that the answer to the other questions, although I never asked them."

CHAPTER VI

I

A DRAPER occupied the house opposite Fortune, East and Sabre's. On an October afternoon, just before five o'clock, Sabre saw Nona alight from her car and go into the draper's. He put on his hat and coat and descended into the street. As he crossed the road she came out.

"Hello, Marko!"

"What about having some tea somewhere?"

"I think that's a good idea."

He suggested the Chaister Tea Rooms. She spoke to the chauffeur and accompanied him.

Nona knew some account of her summer visitations. Sabre spoke a little of local business. But the subjects were but skirmishers thrown out before dense armies of thoughts that massed behind, and rolled, and rolled away. When pretence of dragging out the meal could no longer be maintained, Nona looked at her watch. "Well, I must be getting back. We haven't had a particularly enormous tea, but the chauffeur's had notice."

Sabre said, "Yes, let's get out of this." It was as if a night the thing had been a storm.

He put her into the car. She was so very, very quiet. He said, "I've half a mind to drive up with you. I'd like a ride, and a walk back."

II

They were within the gates

"I OUGHT TO HAVE MARRIED YOU, MARKO."

had been a dull day. Evening stood palely far up the long avenue of the drive and in the distance about the park on either hand. Among October's crossing leaves, a small disquiet stirred. The leaves banked orderly between their parent trunks. Sabre noticed as a curious thing now, when they stirred, they only trembled in their massed formation, not broke their ranks, as if some live thing ran beneath them.

He said, "Do you know what this seems to me? It seems as though it was only yesterday, or this morning, that you came to see me at the office and we talked. Well, I want it to be only yesterday. I want to go on from there."

She said, "Yes."

He hardly could hear the word. He looked at her. She was as tall as he. Not least of the contributions to her beauty in his eyes was the supple grace of her stature. But her face was averted; and he wanted most terribly to see her face. "Stand up straight and look at me, Nona." He touched her arm. "I want to see your face."

She turned towards him and raised [illegible] "Oh, what is it [illegible] Marko?"

There was that which glistened upon her lower lids; and about her mouth were trembling movements; and in her throat a pulse beating.

He said, "It's you I want to say something. I want you to explain some things. Some things you said, Nona, when you came to my room that day and shook hands you said, "There!" when you gave me your hand. You took off your glove and said 'There.' I want to know why you said 'There!' And you said, 'Well, I had to come.' And you said you were flotsam. And that night—when we'd been up to you—you said, 'Oh, Marko, do write to me.' I want you to explain what you meant."

She said, "Oh, how can you remember, you must explain."

He answered "Because I remember, you must explain."

"Please let me sit down, Marko." She faltered a little lamely. "I can explain better sitting down."

A felled trunk had been shored against the trees facing towards the parkland. They went to it and he sat beside her. She sat upright but bending forward a little over her crossed knees, her hands clasped on them, looking before her across the park.

"No, you must look at me," he said.

She very slowly turned her body towards him. He thought her most beautiful and the expression of her beautiful face was most terrible to him in all his emotions.

III

She spoke very slowly, almost with a perceptible pause between each word. She said, "Well, I'll tell you. I said 'because,' didn't I? If I explain that to you know what flotsam is, Marko. Have you ever looked it up in the dictionary? The dictionary says it terribly. 'Goods shipwrecked and found floating on the sea.' I'm twenty-eight, Marko. I suppose that's not really very old. It seems a terrible age to me. You see, you judge age by what you are in contrast with what you were. If you're very happy I think it can't matter how old you are. If you look back to when you were happy and then come to know when you're not, it seems a most terrible and tremendous self-cruel you see yourself just floating—drifting further and further away from the hoping years and just being taken along, taken along, to God knows where, God knows to what."

She put out the palms of her hands towards where in the evening [illegible] somberly across the park. "That's very frightening, Marko."

"Well, all the time there was you, Marko. In those two years when we were away it got awful. In those two years I knew I was flotsam. One day—in India—I went and looked at it in the little dictionary in my writing case, and I knew I was. Do you know what I did? I crossed out flotsam in the dictionary and wrote Nona. There it was and it was the most exact thing—Nona: goods shipwrecked and found floating in the sea. I meant to have torn out the page. I forgot. I left it there and Tony saw it."

Sabre said, "What did he say?" In all she had told him there was something omitted. He knew that his question approached the missing quantities. But she did not answer it.

He had desired her to look at him, but it was he who first turned away. He sat with his head between his hands, his elbows on his knees.

She repeated, with rather a plaintive note, as though in his pose she saw some pain she had caused him, "You see, I had known you all my life, Marko—"

He said, still looking upon the ground between his feet. "But you haven't explained anything. You've only told me. You haven't explained why."

She said with astounding simplicity, "Well, you see, Marko, I made a mistake. I guess a most frightful mistake. I chose. I chose wrong. I ought to have married you, Marko."

Any last words were a groan. "Nona—Nona—"

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Those first or earliest Americans of ours were sure some queer "birds," with queerer customs. Here is some evidence of that fact worth reading:

A Bangor, Maine, attorney attending court in the ancient town of Wiscasset, Lincoln County, spent a rainy afternoon rummaging through the colonial records of the place, and in the course of his reading came across the official registration of a "smock marriage." Not knowing what a "smock marriage" was, he looked further and got some light on a custom that prevailed in England and in some of the colonies as well in the eighteenth century.

Smock marriages were weddings where the bride appeared dressed only in a white chemise or sheet. The reason for it was the belief that if a man married a woman who was in debt he could be held liable for what she owned if he received with her any of her property; and also that if a woman married a man who was in debt his creditors could not take her property to satisfy their claims if he had received nothing from her at marriage. In England, says an antiquarian, there was at least one case where a bride was in paris naturalibus while the ceremony was being performed in the great church at Birmingham. The minister at first refused to perform the ceremony, but could find nothing in the rubric to prevent it, so he married the pair.

To carry out the law fully as the people understood it the ceremony should always have been performed it was in the Birmingham case but various expedients were contrived to get around it. Sometimes the bride stood in a closet and put her hand through a hole in the door; sometimes she stood behind a cloth screen and put her hand out at one side again, she would wind about her a white sheet furnished by the bride groom; sometimes she stood in her chemise, or "smock." Eventually, in Essex County, immodesty and embarrassment were avoided by the groom furnishing all the clothes worn by the bride retaining title in the same in himself. This he did in the presence of witnesses that he might be able to prove the fact in the event that he was sued for any debts she might have contracted.

A marriage of this kind was performed in Bradford in 1773, the following being a true copy of the record:

A "Foxy" Bridegroom

"Bradford, Dec. ye 24, 1773:

"This may certifie whomsoever it may concerne that James Bailey of Bradford, who was married to the widow Mary Bacon Nov. 22 last past [illegible] subscriber then declared [illegible] the said [illegible] without [illegible] of Thomas Stickney & Margaret the wife of Caleb Burbank, all of Bradford witnesses that the clothes she then had on were of his providing and bestowing upon her.

"WILLIAM BALCH, minister of ye Gospel."

It is noted by the same writer that in all cases of smock marriages that have come to his knowledge the brides have been widows. It is thought that during the reign of George III. there were as many smock marriages in Maine, then part of the Province of Massachusetts Bay chiefly in the Counties of Lincoln and York, or in the territory that now is so known. One such marriage is reported in the archives of the Town of Friendship, Knox County, originally known as Meduncook (signifying Sandy Harbor.) It is also one of the few instances in Maine history where advantage was taken of the provision of the law that in a community where there resided neither minister nor magistrate a man and woman who appeared before witnesses, read the marriage service to each other and signed a marriage agreement became lawfully wedded.

Married Themselves

Such a marriage was performed in 1773, and the record on the town books reads:

"Certificate—This may certify all whom it concerns that W. Elwell, of Meduncook hath been duly published to Hannah Thomas of Meduncook.

"(Sd) SEDATE WADSWORTH.
'clerk Meduncook April ye 18th, 1772'

"Meduncook, May 12th. 1772
Whereas the subscribers, Wm. Elwell and Hannah Thomas being lawfully published & desirous of entering into the holy state of Marriage & being confined in a place where here is neither a minister or a magistrate do by these presents & in the presence of Almighty God & before these witnesse that may sign this instrument, engage & do take each other as man and wife, according to the laws of God and man, according to the best of our capacities & although we were married by a magistrate of minister. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands:
'WILLIAM ELWELL
'HANNAH THOMAS, her X mark."

"Signed in the presence of we the subscribers, & that the man took her, as were naked & gave her clothes to put on—Wm. E. Frost, Samuel Condon, Cornelius Morton, Mary Condon, her X mark, Otis Pinkham, Jerey W. Larry, her X mark.

"N. B.—Wm. Elwell & Hannah Thomas took the common prayer book after they had signed the above instrument & read the church ceremony of marriage to each other in serious manner before the witnesses to the above instrument before me—Wm Frost.

"The afore-said William Elwell & Hannah Thomas were married in the above manner, May 12th, 1772—then a child named Hannah, was born June ye 21st, 1773; their second son, named Elias, born April ye 5th 1776."

There is nothing to show that the practice of smock marriage outlived the Revolution. In Maine, up to 1852, a husband was liable for debts of his wife contracted before marriage and no such subterfuge as the smock marriage could relieve him, considering the glory of the bridal finery of today.

Foods Rich in Proteids.

The reason why all forms of meat, cheese and eggs form so satisfying a diet is not because they are rich in calories but because they are rich in proteid. In order to be properly nourished one may paraphrase the famous proverb, "Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves," and make it read, 'Take care of the proteid and the calories will take care of themselves."

WOMAN COULD NOT WORK

Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Paul, Minn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a tired, worn-out feeling and painful periods. I used to get up with a pain in my head and pains in my lower parts and back. Often I was not able to do my work. I read in your little book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it. I feel so well and strong and can do every bit of my work and not a pain in my back now. I recommend your medicine and you can use this letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. PHIL. MASER, 801 Winslow St., St. Paul, Minn.

Just another case where a woman found relief by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many times these tired, worn-out feelings and pains about the body are from troubles only women have. The Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for just this condition. The good results are noted by the disagreeable symptoms passing away—[illegible]

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Woman's Medicine for Women's Ailments. Always reliable.

FOUR MEDALS ON HIS BREAST

Carl M. Lange of Nebraska Is That State's Most Decorated World War Veteran.

Four medals on his breast and the French cord on his arm make Carl M. Lange of Hartington, Neb., that state's most decorated World war veteran. Comparatively few men who fought for or with France have had the coveted Medaille Militaire bestowed on them. This decoration goes only to enlisted men and to commanders-in-chief of armies in the field. No officer in between is eligible to receive the medal. Yet Lange was awarded two. One Marshal Petain pinned on his O. D. Several months after the armistice Lange opened a registered package with a French stamp on it and found another Medaille Militaire.

The highest honor Nebraska could give one of its World war heroes went to Lange also. He was chosen by the state commander of the American Legion to officially represent Nebraska at the burial in Arlington cemetery of the "Unknown Soldier." The Distinguished Service cross, bestowed personally by General Pershing, the Croix de Guerre with palms and the knowledge that he carried Merle Hay from the trenches are other things that remind Lange of his war service. Hay was the first Iowa boy killed in the war and one of the first three American boys to die in action.

WILL CONDUCT BAND CONTEST

Charles E. Boehler, Veteran Musician, Selected to Direct National Convention Feature.

Judging a baby show is an easy task compared to the role assigned to Charles E. Boehler, who will conduct a prize contest among the 100 bands and drum corps expected at the American Legion national convention in New Orleans next October.

Prizes for the band contest will be: First, $1,000; second, $500, and third, $250. The bands will be judged on the following basis: Playing, 75 points; appearance, 10 points; marching, 10 points; number of instruments, 5 points.

The winner of the drum corps contest will receive $250, with a prize of $100 for second place. Playing will count for 50 points; appearance, 20 points; marching, 20 points; number of instruments, 10 points.

Mr. Boehler is a former president of the New Orleans Branch of the American Federation of Musicians. He served as a band leader in the Spanish-American and World wars and on the Mexican border. During the World war he was senior band master of the Thirty-first division.

The Private's Dilemma.

I'd like to be a corpril and with the corpris stand,
A chevron on my coat sleeve and a warrant in my hand
But when I think it over all my hope to gloom descends,
I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends

The private marches dumbly—this way, that way, what's the odds?
While the corpril joins the shouting when the order's "Right by squads!"
But when the drill is over then the corpril's glory ends,
Oh, I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends

The extra pay comes handy and the chevron makes one proud,
But it's tough to be a noncom when your heart is with the crowd,
To persecute your buddies with commands the captain sends,
Yes, I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends'

—Gleason Pease, in American Legion Weekly.

Whaddya Mean, Hard Luck?

The colonel had heard of two recent disasters in the family of his colored orderly and was surprised to find him apparently as cheerful as ever when he returned to duty after a brief furlough home.

"Well, Sam," said the colonel sympathetically, "I hear you have had some hard luck."

"What, me, suh? Nossuh, Ah ain' had no hahd luck."

"Why, wasn't that your brother who was killed in a railroad wreck recently and wasn't that your wife that was hurt in an automobile accident?"

"Oh, yassuh, yassuh—but dat's deir hahd luck—not mine."—American Legion Weekly.

SINGLE MEN GET INTO MORE TROUBLE THAN MARRIED, SAY STATE TROOPERS

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 19.—(U. P.)—Single men get into more trouble than married men.

Complete tabulated reports of arrests made by the Pennsylvania State Police during 1921 made public here today showed that 7,141 single men arrested compared to only 5,767 married men.

The "dangerous age" proved to be 24. More men were arrested at that age than at any other.

Women caused the State troopers almost no trouble. Out of a total of nearly 13,000 arrests only 706 were women.

Human failings were indicated in comparative importance by the following principal causes for arrest: avarice 5,550; recklessness, 4,289; alcoholic stimulant 1,270; revenge 1,026.

Thirty-seven ten year olds became so dangerous to the peace of the Commonwealth that they had to be arrested. One man of 80 was likewise caught in the net of Pennsylvania's mounted guardians of the law.

Of all the prisoners rounded up by the troopers 11,798 were for first offenses, 178 for second offenses and 932 were habitual criminals

NATION'S GREATEST CONCERN IS PEACE HARDING DECLARES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—This Country's principal concern is for peace and the securities of peace, President Harding declared today in an address to one thousand citizen soldiers he reviewed on the grounds back of the White House. There is no thought of armed warfare and no desire to carry out an armed campaign in the e instruction the President said in explaining the effort of the country to induce the young men of the country to enter the soldiers' training camps.

PREPAREDNESS AGAIN

Washington D. C. Aug. 22.—American manhood is rising to the necessity for military preparedness, in the opinion of Geenral John J. Pershing head of the army of the United States The people of the country are displaying a greater interest in military training now than at any time since the signing of the armistice. General Pershing's statements are regarded as particularly significant coming as they do immediately after President Harding's address yesterday to a large body of citizen soldiers in which he said that America wants no more war but wants to be prepared for war.

PROGRESS ON COAL INVESGTIGATING COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 22.—The Harding proposal for a commission to investigate every phase of the coal industry will be forced through Congress before the end of the week, it was believed here today. Senator Borah's bill creating a coal commission of five members was reported favorably to the House by the committee on labor. The bill, approved by President Harding, is expected to receive prompt and favorable action in the Senate this week. At the suggestion of Mr. Harding, the personnel of the committee was raised from three to five members and the time limit in which the commission will be required to report its findings to Congress was cut from nine to five months.

President Harding wants the committee that makes the investigation into the coal industry to be composed only of representatives of the public, it was said at the White House today. Announcement of the President's opposition to a tripartite commission composed of representatives of the miners, operators and the public was made shortly after the Senate labor committee reported Senator Borah's bill to the Senate.

Rail Heads And Shop Craft Unions Are Silent On Meeting of Tomorrow

New York, Aug. 21.—Preliminary to the session of the Association of Railway Executives on Wednesday when members will vote their attitude towards a proposal of the Big Five brotherhoods for ending the shop crafts strike, the eastern president's conference today held a secret meeting to formulate a policy for its 11 members to promote at the nations' session. What action the eastern roads, which include several of the most powerful lines, will finally pursue, was not indicated, those attending asserting they had been pledged to secrecy. The only comment was made by L. F. Loree, of the Delaware & Hudson, who issued a statement setting forth that Atlantic coast roads which normally employ 161,339 shopmen, had brought the forces up to 71.6 per cent of that figure on August 18. This represents an increase of 2.5 per cent over the week ending August 11, the statement indicated.

"It was expected that the ratio of increase of August 11 would be continued on the 18th but the occurrence of last week put a damper on recruiting" said Mr. Loree "Nothing can be more destructive than to introduce a feeling of uncertainty into a situation such as this." Those that were present at the conference were the one who led the opposition when the national body of chiefs rejected the President's two proposals for ending the strike by submitting the controversy issue to the labor board. The wall of silence thrown about the strike situation was maintained today by both sides.

TESTING FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Reports Show That Eradication Work Can Be Carried on Without Destroying Industry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That testing cattle for tuberculosis and the cleaning up of infected herds are having a permanent effect in reducing the extent of the disease is shown conclusively by figures recently collected by the United States Department of Agriculture from inspectors in charge of the eradication work in various parts of the country. The inspectors were asked to supply figures on the results of three or more tests on badly diseased herds, those that had not less than 10 per cent of reactors on the first test. The first test on more than 58,000 cattle in these bad herds showed that 20 per cent had tuberculosis. Another test six months later on the same herds, from which the reactors had been removed, showed only 6.9 per cent of the disease. By another six months the percentage had gone down to 2.8. A fourth test on more than 25,000 of these cattle showed only 1.8 per cent of tuberculosis.

The reports from which these figures were taken show that under normal conditions herds very badly diseased may be established as relatively free in a short time. They also show that eradication work can be carried on without destroying the cattle industry as is sometimes thought. Erratic results were obtained on a very few of the 1882 herds tested, the list of this class containing less than 100. Out of the 126,668 herds under observation December 1, 1921, there were only a very few that had not shown satisfactory improvement as a result of testing.

If Any of These Cows Have Tuberculosis the Hogs Following Them Are Certain to Get the Disease.

PREVENT ANIMAL DISEASES

By Taking Proper Precautionary Measures Many Ailments Could Be Thwarted.

Many of the diseases suffered by live stock on the farm could be prevented by proper precautionary measures, according to Dr Robert Graham of the University of Illinois. Nearly all diseases to which animals succumb are preventable, he declares, and the surest way to keep your animals healthy is to adopt such health measures as will prevent them from getting sick

The continuous use of old feed lots year after year without regard to rotation is one way to spread disease. Each class of live stock has its own peculiar ailments which may be largely eliminated by the rotation of feed lots.

Keep yourself posted as to what diseases are prevalent in your neighborhood, and then do everything in your power to keep your own live stock from getting them.

FEEDS FOR WORKING HORSES

Mature Animals Require Starchy or Carbonaceous Rations to Furnish Needed Fuel.

The character of feed required by horses that are working is quite different from that required by young growing animals or dairy cows. Mature horses need starchy or carbonaceous feeds to furnish fuel rather than large amounts of protein. For this reason corn and timothy hay may be fed more liberally than such protein feeds as wheat and alfalfa. Oats furnish most of the protein needed, and a good rule for feeding a horse doing moderate work is given as one and one-fourth pounds of hay and three fourths pound of grain to each hundred pounds of wheat, but horses at hard work are sometimes given as much as one and one-fourth pounds of grain.

PASTURE IS PIG ESSENTIAL

Rape, Alfalfa and Clover Are Bone and Muscle Building Feeds and Cheapen Gains.

Pasture is of course vital to the best development of pigs. Rape, alfalfa or clover should be available to the spring pigs, as these forages contain much bone and muscle-building feed, and they help to cheapen gains.

not know.

Regarding the Chandler car, which he traded in when he bought his Hupmobile, he said he purchased from a fellow who sat beside him at the Cleveland ball park. Said he didn't know his name but that he paid $1,100 for it. This car was identified by Detective Kucera yesterday as a car stolen from the Milwaukee Insurance Company and was taken on Cleveland Heights in 1921.

Linsenbigler also said he got the Ford coupes he sold here from Bert Jones, the railroad man arrested with him at Cleveland. The car purchased by Robert Leavy he alleges cost him $425. The one purchased by Robert Gray, he says, he paid Jones $400 for and went to Pittsburg to meet Jones with the car, driving it to Clearfield from there himself. The car sold to S. C. Watts was purchased from Jones for $375, he says.

How the Cars Were Robbed.

In speaking of the car robberies, Fisher said Yeager, the railroad detective, would open the cars in the yard at Elyria and kick the bales and bundles of merchandise out along the tracks, when the others would come along and load it on the Reo truck they used and haul it the intervening twenty-six miles into Cleveland The Reo truck used, the detective says, was stolen in Buffalo, N. Y.

How They Were Picked Up.

The Saturday night previous to the arrest, one hundred cars were robbed in the Elyria and Cleveland yards and the detectives working on the series of robberies had developed their case to the point where they knew who the robbers were. Four officers drove to the Jones home on Cleveland Heights and waited till almost morning for the coming of the truck load of loot. They parked their car in the driveway to the Jones garage and it was there when the truck occupied by Jones, Linsenbigler and Kramer came along. Seeing the car parked in the driveway, the truck, instead of turning in, continued on. By this time the detectives thought they had missed the outfit and, getting in their machine, went to headquarters for information Meantime the truck was driven some distance beyond the Jones home and returning to find the other machine had pulled out, decided it had been some casual traveler parked there, drove into the garage with their truck. They were sitting the breakfast table when the detectives returned, and bursting in on them, placed the three men under arrest. Yeager was picked up afterwards.

Have Hearing Today.

Jones and Yeager succeeded in securing $2,500 bail each and were released for the hearing which takes place today. Detective Kucera says the quartette will be given a hearing in municipal court today, following which they will be turned over to the United States court for final disposition, the crime of car robbing being an offense against inter-State commerce laws.

Loot Recovered Taken Back.

The Chandler car and the rugs recovered on the first visit of Detective Fisher to Clearfield were taken back by him to Cleveland today Detective Kucera said he didn't believe the purchasers of the stolen Fords would ever be required to turn over their coupes as it was almost impossible to locate the original owners who had no doubt been reimbursed for their losses by the insurance companies and the changed numbers making it hard to identify them.

Visiting Detective Pays Fine.

Detective Fisher, who was at the Penn Motor Sales Co. last evening, had an altercation with Norman Linsenbigler, a brother of Lee. Fisher was in the office at the garage when Linsenbigler came in to use the telephone. He accused Fisher of trying to overhear his conversation over the 'phone and after an exchange of "pleasantries" the detective struck Linsenbigler across the face and put him out of the place. Linsenbigler made information against Fisher before 'Squire Joseph John and Constable Reilley arrested him about 9 o'clock last night. It cost Fisher $6.25.

Women to Sit In House of Lords, Says Lady Rhondda, In U. S.

New York, Aug. 19.—Because principle and right always triumph, eventually all countries will pass laws for the protection of children and will grant equal political right to women.

Such is the prediction of Viscountess Rhondda, British coal magnate, reformer and political leader, just arrived in this country for a five-week holiday in the Connecticut hills.

The viscountess won world-wide notice when her application for membership in the House of Lords was turned down last May.

"Principle is bound to win," she declares. "That's why I am sure women will yet sit in the House of Lords. Politics has postponed but cannot bar the day when this will be.

Era of Justice Ahead.

"In England, as here, justice to women, children and the oppressed is beginning to be done. The Six Point Group, composed of women, is working especially along these lines.

"We chose our six points because they embodied important reforms we believed the public would rally about. One of the most important is a bill to protect young girls from assault.

"Through the activity of our two women members of Parliament, we have already obtained partial action in this matter.

"At least, we have got through a bill which makes it no longer possible for a man to defend himself against assault charges by claiming that he thought the girl was over 16, the age of consent.

"If she really was under age, he must be punished, no matter what he thought.

LADY RHONDDA

Seek Widow's Pension.

"Another measure for which we are working hard is a pension bill for widowed mothers. In an effort to get equal pay for women, we have selected teachers and civil service employes to begin with, since they are paid, either directly or indirectly by the government.

"We constantly hear in England that your women teachers are paid as much as your men. That is one point I shall be interested to investigate.

"Another bill we are pushing in the interest of justice is one to raise the status of children born out of wedlock. The law now holds the child responsible for its parents' fault.

"Public opinion is especially on our side in this matter. The ideal of justice also will be upheld when we have had mothers made equal guardians of their children with the fathers."

Lady Rhondda has been called the "busiest" rich woman in England. She inherited millions from her father, food controller of Great Britain during the war, but she puts in 12 hours a day working for the 27 social and political reform measures she sponsors.

Her mode of living is simple. Her name was not on the passenger list of the ship on which she came here and her vacation in Connecticut will be entirely minus social frills.

Her manner is cordial and unaffected. In dress, too, she prefers the unostentatious. When seen here, she wore a loose, dark blue crepe de chine frock, cut for comfort rather than fashion.

She is typically British in appearance—tall, robust, with deep-blue eyes, fluffy brown hair, clear skin and high color. She speaks easily and to the point, with understanding and humor.

In addition to her work for women and children, Lady Rhondda personally manages the huge coal mine interests which came to her from her father. She is said to apply the good business sense gained thereby in her political campaigns and to have won a number of points through her experience in commerce.

Lady Rhondda will return to England the middle of September to aid in pushing a number of women's bills.

Resolutions Adopted By Clearfield Co. Pomona Grange No. 33 Aug. 3rd

We, the undersigned committee on resolutions, appointed by the Worthy-Master, respectfully recommend the following resolutions:

1. In order to encourage the boys and girls in animal husbandry, we recommend that the Grange Insurance Co., of Clearfield County write a policy on all domestic animals covered by the boys and girls clubs, insuring against death from any cause.

2. Recognizing the grandeur and sublimity of the Grange Work, we recommend that each subordiate grange establish a school of instruction to teach the work ritual, and that each new member be required to learn the work of each degree before advancement, and that all officers be required to commit the work to memory so that it can be put on without referring to the annal.

3. In order to extend the efficiency of the Public Schools, and to give all our boys and girls an opportunity to educate themselves, we recommend the establishing of a County Public Library, under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and for this purpose that a permanent committee be appointed from this Pomona to take up the work, present it to the subordinate granges of the County, and to carry on propaganda until a library is established.

4. In the resolution adopted at the last meeting of this grange, the work of the Department of Public Education was condemned for its effort to "Germanize" our Public School System. We recommend that said resolution be re-adopted at this meeting and that every effort be made to destroy "Fineganism" in the school system of the State, and that the management of our schools be restored to its proper place in our state government.

5. We believe that public office is a public trust, and it is not for the furthering of private interests, and we deplore the present tendency to centralize both National and State Government, and every effort should be made to counteract this tendency, and to restore local government to the local people as contemplated by the fathers who established the American system.

6. While the Grange is not a political organization, and its members are expected to exercise their own judgment in the use of the franchise, yet the rights of the people are only safe guarded by the policies of political parties as set forth in their platform. We believe the time has come when it is a question of men, rather than parties, and what is known as "partyism" must be set aside and men be elected who have demonstrated their fitness for office, judged by their performance in life, rather than their regularity as party men, and when the granger knows of such a man, he should support him, and advocate his election.

7. Whereas there are a number of farmers in Clearfield County, who are breeding registered stock, and it has been almost impossible to obtain an accurate directory of the breeds of stock owned by each, and since some of the members of the Pomona Grange in adjoining counties have published a directory through its association of subordinate grange and the farm bureau.

Therefore, be it resolved that the Worthy Master of this Pomona Grange appoint a committee of three to assist the farm bureau to secure the proper information, and by the aid of the subordinate granges, and the farm bureau, to publish such information in a directory, to include both male and female of all registered stock.

8. This Grange tenders a vote of thanks to Kylertown Grange No. 1406 for their hospitality in entertaining the Pomona Grange No. 33 and that this Pomona hopes Kylertown Grange No. 1406 soon extends another invitation to us to be in their midst.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Two Things Life Taught Him.

The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many-planed aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single facet.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Necessity for Friction.

Let Us Convince You That This Is Really The Home of BETTER PRINTING

Most folks associate the average newspaper with hurly burly printing, the kind that you don't care whether it's a good looking job or just "slammed" together. However, many folks who have tried us out on one piece of printing have been very agreeably surprised when the work was delivered. They found that even the rough job ---the one that they wanted in a real hurry---was done in a better way and they appreciated it. There was a close application to detail, there was everything done that would make it worth while.

OUT ON TIME

One of the things we are exceedingly cranky about is getting your work out when we promised it. Several folks, trying out our business printing department for the first time, have remarked, "Why, you have it done when you said you would" as if they really didn't expect it and didn't look for it.

But we get 'em out on time and just when we say we will. That should be a real argument for printing buyers who want what they want when they want it. And we don't know of anything that is more trying to anyone than having to wait for some printed piece when you have your plans all laid out to do something and then have to wait for the printing.

Again, let us impress on you---WE GET PRINTING OUT WHEN WE SAY WE WILL.

REAL CRAFTSMANSHIP

The man in charge of the better business printing department is a man who has had many years experience in the printing art. He knows the proper sort of type that will harmonize with the purpose for which you want the printing. He knows where to use a strong face of type; he knows where to use a light and dainty face. And, too, he is exceedingly particular about the way any printed piece is sent out—it must be just right, no half way measures, nor "that's good enough" way with him.

And then we have a designer and writer who can take hold of your rough idea and work it out so that about all you have to do is bring the idea and we put it in tangible shape for you.

We have gotten some very fine recommendation on work that has gone out of this department during the past few months and you'll find that if you'll put us against your hardest printing work, that you'll have it done just as you want it. Or if you put the entire idea up to us, you'll find that we catch your idea and put it through.

THE HOME RADIO

How to Make and Use It By A. HYATT VERRILL

XVII. LOOSE-COUPLED COILS

Coils, or, as they are more often called, tuning coils, are very essential parts of radio telegraphy and telephony. The old style tuning coil, as used in wireless telegraphy, has been largely superseded by the type known as loose-coupled coils or adjustable-coils which may be altered or adjusted to tune much finer or more closely than by the old type coil. Although it is not difficult to make a loose-coupled coil yet, as is the case with many of the parts of radio sets, it is as cheap and far more satisfactory to purchase them ready made. The conventional type of loose-coupled coil consists of two distinct coils, one within the other, as shown in Fig. 46. One of these is the primary coil, the other the secondary or induction coil. The two are so arranged that the inner or secondary coil slips back and forth within the larger or primary coil, thus varying the coupling or induction, for the electricity—or oscillations—in the secondary coil is merely induced by the primary circuit in the outer coil, so that if a portion of the secondary coil is withdrawn from the primary coil, as shown in the figure, there will be less induced current and in this way tuning is accomplished. To allow of still finer adjustment, the primary coil is provided with an adjustable slider A, and the secondary coil has a multi-pointed switch B.

Another type of loose-coupled coil is arranged so that one coil revolves within the other; while another type, which is the simplest of all for the amateur to construct and gives the best results, is composed of three discs or coils "stagger-wound" which may be adjusted back and forth. To make one of these inductors you will require some stiff, smooth cardboard, heavy Bristol board, thin fibreboard or similar composition and about half a pound of No. 24 D. C. C. wire. Also in setting up and arranging the coils, you will require binding posts, knobs, a little sheet brass and a few other odds and ends. With a pair of dividers or compasses draw three circles on the cardboard or fibre, each about four to five inches in diameter, having all exactly the same size. Then, using the dividers, scribe off an unequal number (five, seven, or nine) marks around the circumference of each circle. Fig. 47, A. Next, still using the dividers, draw a smaller circle, say one and one-half inches to two and one-half inches in diameter within each circle (B). If the circles are four inches in diameter use the smaller circle inside, if five inches the larger one, and with a rule draw radiating lines one-fourth of an inch apart from each of the marks on the outer circumference to the center of the circle (C). With a pair of scissors or a sharp knife (if cardboard is used) or a fine saw (if fibre), cut out the discs and cut slots in each disc according to the marks, as shown at (D).

Next, if you have used cardboard, give each slotted disc a thorough covering with shellac, using at least three coats, and when thoroughly dry proceed to wind the discs or coils. In doing this, start the wire—being sure to leave enough for connections—at a point at the inner end of one slot and wind over one segment and under the next, and as the number is uneven you will find that the wires will thus cross, as shown at (E). The number of times the wire should be passed can only be decided upon by experimenting after the coil is in use, but, as a starter, about twenty-five or thirty turns on one, about one and one-half times as many, or say thirty-eight to forty-five on the second, and twice as many on the third as on the first, or from fifty to sixty, will be somewhere near right. Then, by removing or adding a few turns, as you adjust your receivers you can finally secure the very best results. To mount this coil so it may be used, the coil or disc with the least turns, or, in other words, the primary coil, should be mounted rigidly and immovably and should be connected by means of binding posts to the aerial and ground wires. The secondary coil and the tickler coil should then be fastened to brass or metal strips about two or two and one-half inches long, one-sixteenth inch thick and half an inch wide. One end of each strip should be attached by small bolts or screws to the coils and the other end attached to a movable peg or bolt with a fibre or bakelite knob at the opposite end. Fig. 48 shows clearly how this is done. In this way, the secondary and tickler may be swung back and forth to cover more or less of the primary, but great care should be used that the tickler does not touch the primary coil. When the coil is thus mounted on a proper panel or stand, it should be wired as shown in Fig. 49, and when the whole set is in good working order and final adjustments made, it should all be enclosed in a neat wooden case with a hinged top or cover. Fig. 50, although of course this is merely a protective measure and does not affect the working efficiency of the set. It must be clearly understood, however, that this type of coil can only be used in connection with a vacuum-tube outfit as shown. When all wiring is complete and adjustments are ready to be made, connect the storage battery, as shown; place the lamp or tube in its socket and gradually turn on the rheostat to see if the tube glows properly. Never turn on the current to the bulb quickly or to full power, or the filament will be needlessly burnt out and wasted long before its time. Next, connect the B (or dry) battery, the ground and aerial and, finally, the phones.

In using this outfit, turn on the bulb slowly, adjust the knobs carrying the coils so that all three are in line and then adjust or tune the variable condenser until the signals you wish to hear are clear. Then, by gradually adjusting the movable coils, you can cut out interference and also make the signals, music or other sounds louder. When the two movable coils are entirely away from the primary coil you will have your shortest wave length, while when all three are together, you will have the longest wave length.

HOMESICK FOR THE ARMY

Ah Han Kook, Korean With Honorable Record in the U. S. A., Returns to the Service.

Born in Korea, taken to Hawaii when a child, without any trace of relatives, an honorable record in the United States army behind him, Ah Han Kook, a little brown man, called at the American Legion headquarters in Indianapolis the other day and declared his intention of "going back home" to the army.

"I was a dental officer's assistant in San Francisco," Kook, private first class and specialist fourth class, medical department, said, producing an honorable discharge to prove it. "The officer was Dr. H. C. Feyler, now of 822 Gay street, Portsmouth, O. He asked me to come to see him when I got out of the army. He is in private practice now. So when my enlistment expired in San Francisco, I got on a train and went to Portsmouth. The officer said he would like to have me work for him. He treated me very good and I had a pleasant visit with him, but I got homesick. The army is the only home I know. I am a member of the American Legion, Schofield Barracks, H. T., post No. 6, and I heard a lot about Legion headquarters in Indianapolis, so I thought I would like to see them."

Kook was shown about the offices at Legion headquarters and the various phases of the work explained to him. Then this little brown man, now an American citizen, who first entered military service in the National Guard at Hawaii in August, 1917, and continued the service through the national army and the regulars until May 26, 1922, departed for Fort Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, to reenlist.

"Sure, he was homesick for the army," the recruiting officer at the fort said later over the telephone. "We welcome him back."

WOULD BE SECOND TO NONE

James Shelley, Phoenix, Sent to West Point, Wishes to Be First-Class Officer.

President Harding has appointed another World war veteran to West Point. James Shelley of Phoenix, Ariz., told a "white lie" and at sixteen was enlisted as a regular in the army. He served nine months overseas with the artillery. He is now a "plebe" at the academy where after four years' hard work he will be graduated a second lieutenant.

The stuff that is Shelley's and which made him enlist when under age evidenced itself when he answered the telegram of West Point officials who asked: "What is your ambition?" Shelley had to make his answer in seven words, but it was to the point. He said: "I want to be second to none."

FOR LEGION POST IN KOREA

Application for Charter Is Made to the Legion's National Organization Department.

An application has just been received for a charter for an American Legion post in Korea by the Legion's national organization department in Indianapolis. There are 15 persons eligible for membership in Korea and the application bears the names of those 15 persons. The local post will have its headquarters at Kwangju, Chosen. The post in Korea is being organized by M. L. Swineheart, treasurer of the South Presbyterian mission in that country. In his letter accompanying the application for a charter, Mr. Swineheart said: "Please have the application acted upon as quickly as possible as we have good reason for wanting to get busy and get the post organized into a going concern."

It is unfortunate that some World war veterans in the United States where it is harder to stay out of the Legion than it is to get into it don't get some of this enthusiasm manifested by their erstwhile comrades in arms in far away Korea.

Carrying On With the American Legion

Shell shock caused Thurman K Williamson, Lincoln, Neb., World war veteran, to forget the girl he was engaged to and marry another. The District court has just annulled Williamson's marriage, leaving him free to carry out his first pledge.

FARM ANIMALS

BLACK COLOR IS HEREDITARY

Feeding and Management of Sheep Have Nothing to Do With Appearance of Black Lambs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The appearance of black lambs in a flock made up entirely of white sheep has been for ages, and is still, a cause for wonder and the feeds of superstitions. But the study of the laws of breeding and heredity has explained the reasons for the sporadic appearance of these off-color specimens. In a letter to a farmer who reported 25 black lambs from a flock of 175 purebred Shropshire ewes, all white, and who considered certain feeds the cause, the United States Department of Agriculture gives a clear statement of the principles involved.

Feeding and management of sheep, says Dr. Sewall Wright, specialist in animal genetics, have nothing to do with the appearance of black lambs. The black color is hereditary even though it may be transmitted by ordinary white sheep. The black color in such a case is what is called a recessive character. White sheep which transmit this character at all transmit black in 50 per cent of their reproductive cells (ova in the case of ewes and spermatozoa in the case of rams) and white in the remaining 50 per cent. Thus, such white sheep mated with blacks (which can only transmit black) produce 50 per cent black lambs and 50 per cent white. All of these white lambs can transmit black.

White sheep which transmit only white, mated with blacks, produce only white lambs, but all of these lambs can transmit black. When both ewe and ram are white, but both transmit black, about 25 per cent of the lambs are black, 50 per cent are white, which transmit black, while the remaining 25 per cent are true-breeding whites. In this case it is an even chance that a given ovum will transmit black and an even chance that it will be fertilized by a male cell which transmits black, making one chance in four that both transmit black, which is necessary for the production of a black lamb.

A Shropshire Sheep.

With 25 black lambs appearing in the flock, it is indicated that about 100 of the 175 ewes transmit black, assuming that all of the rams used transmit it. If not all the rams transmit this color then it is probable that an even larger number of ewes transmit it.

Department of Agriculture Bulletin 965, Principles of Live Stock Breeding, contains a detailed discussion of this problem. It may be obtained from the superintendent of public documents, Government printing office, Washington, D. C., for 15 cents.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

About twenty of the boy and girl friends of Jerry Malloy gathered at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Malloy on South Fourth street last evening and assisted Jerry to properly celebrate his 13th birthday. It was a real surprise to the guest of honor when the guests dropped in, but he had fully recovered by the time the ice cream arrived. A fine evening was the result.

Ten of her little girl friends helped Miss Catherine Schmitt to celebrate her ninth birthday at her home on Second street yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock. The little folks enjoyed themselves to the limit.

Mrs. Elmer Hickok and daughter Georgia of Curwensville were shopping in town today.

Bluebird a Friend of Man.

Like the robin, the bluebird is very domestic, but unlike the robin, it does not prey upon any cultivated product or work any injury whatsoever to the fruit grower. During the fruit season in fact five-sixths of its food consists of insects. It seems, therefore, that the common practice of encouraging the bluebird to nest near houses by placing convenient boxes in which it may build its home is thoroughly justified.

ENTERTAINED FOR FRIENDS

Messrs. John and Foster Wood gave a stag party at Goshen Camp last evening in honor of their boyhood friends, Messrs. McLarren and Shimmel, formerly of Boggs township, but now of Washington, D. C., who are visiting relatives and friends in this section at present. An excellent chicken dinner, with all the trimmings, was provided by Fred Wilson, John Herdman and Hobart Callahan, which was given closest and most satisfactory attention by the twenty-five guests present.

The guests of honor told a whole lot of John Wood's escapades in his "salad days" in the Blue Ball country, but John made us promise not to say anything about that end of it, and besides John is married now and it wouldn't be right to cast up.

It was a most delightful occasion, as all will testify who were fortunate enough to be present.

HELPED "OLD FELLOW" CELEBRATE

Harry Cochrane, one of the Third Ward's good citizens who is "wheeling along gracefully" toward the three score mark, was forced to pause long enough last evening to remember that he had reached Station 57 on life's journey, when just fifty-seven of his friends dropped in at his Merrill street home last evening to remind him of that fact. Great preparations had been made for the affair by Mr. Cochrane and a most enjoyable evening was the result and, as was to be expected, the guest of honor was the happiest person in the crowd. After partaking of delicious refreshments, the guests departed for their homes, expressing the hope that "old fellow" would be prepared to be present at many similar occasions.

The usual Japanese breakfast consists of rice, miso soup, pickles and occasionally fish. Tea is always served with meals, and is drunk clear without sugar or cream. Miso soup consists of strips of radishes, seaweed, eggplant, or other vegetables cooked with bean curd and water. DISTRICT NO. TWO OPERATORS REJECT CLEVELAND PACT

Operators Want to Resume Work Under Old Agreement Instead Of The Cleveland Terms.

MEETING TODAY

Altoona, Aug 22.—Central Coal Association offiecrs yesterday rejected theCleveland agreement in conference with miners of District No. 2. The counter proposals submitted by the operators providing for resumption of work during the negotiations was refused by the miners. Adjournment was taken until today.

The convention of operators and miners for the Central Pennsylvania field, in session at Altoona since Monday, is in a veritable deadlock. A sub-scale committee of seven from each side battled all morning without result and after a short adjournent resumed their session at 2 o'clock and are still battling.

These committees are as follows:

For the operators.—B. M. Clark, Charles T. O'Neil, Webb Shillingford, J. R. Caseley, C. B. Maxwell, Rembrandt Peale and J. William Wetter.

The executive boards of the two associations of operators, comprised the scale committee which met the mine comittee, headed by John Brophy. At this first meeting the miners offered a resolution providing for acceptance of the Cleveland agreement, and it was rejected by the operators, who offered instead that mine officials order a resumption of work under conditions of Rule 25, pending joint negotiations. Rule 25, adopted at Philadelphia, April 26, 1920, by operators and miners, provides that if no new scale agreementis signed before March 31, 1922, all men in mihes shall continue at work at old scale for 30 days, a fter the date of the first meeting to negotiate a scale to succeed the old scale.

The resolution was rejected by the mine workers and an adjournment taken until Tuesday. Having taken part in the Cleveland conference the Pennsylvahia Coal & Coke company is not represented at Altoona and these operations are working. Other mines in the district have gone to work and this fact causes more or less confusion, throughout the field.

Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.—Peace in the Illinois coal fields is only a question of a few hours, it was learned here today. The committee of six finished its work shortly before noon and returned a report to individual meeting of the miners and operators. Unless there is a bolt in the miners or operators meetings the agreement will be signed today, one of the committee of six declared. Following the individual meetings the committee will meet again. The agreement will then be referred to a joint conference.

Washington, D. C. Aug. 22.—Fuel production in Pennsylvania will be increased 20 to 30 per cent by the last of this week, Fuel Distributor Spencer said today. A member of the Federal Fuel Commission who has just returned from the Pennsylvania fields reported today that there would be a resumption of operation in the Pennsylvania fields generally. At the same time Spencer pointed out that nearly half of the coal output of the country is mined in Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 22.—The question of fixing a fair price for coal will be the principal question before the meeting of the commission here today. The meeting called by Chairman Ainey for 3 o'clock this afternoon will be the third meeting of the full commisison and the first one to take up directly the thorny price-

Washington, D. C., Aug. 22.—Railroad executives must accept defeat on the seniority issue if the walk-out of shop workers is to be settled, one of the leading labor figures in the strike told the United Press today. Unless the rail heads are prepared to accept the shopmens' demands for restoration of seniority rights the peace conference of brotherhood leaders and rail executives in New York tomorrow will be futile, he said.

This determined stand on the part of the strikers, the demand of the eastern railroad executives, for a fight to the finish, and the call issued for financial and moral support of the shopmen's strike by the other unions has caused administration leaders to lose the hope they had for an early settlement of the dirpute.

Search is being made throughout this section for two boys who disappeared from their homes in Osceola on Friday last. The boys are William Bizub, aged 13 years, light hair, small for his age, barefooted when he left home. He was clad in blue overalls, shirt and litte hat with Octagon flour ad on it. The other lad is Herbert Nicholson, aged 16. He wore a white cap and white shirtwaist and rode a bicycle.

Information as to the whereabouts of the lads will be thankfully received by William Bilzub, of Osceola Mills.

GIVES ADDRESS ON TAXATION BEFORE COMMERCIAL CLUB

By special request, Attorney James P. O'Laughlin appeared before about sixty members of the Commercial Club last evening to give his address on "Taxation," which he delivered to the Rotary Club some time ago. Mr. O'Laughlin gave an especially lucid and enlightening exposition of our methods of taxation, pointing out their defects; and best of all, the remedy for the ills.

There is a State-wide agitation now for a revision of our system of taxation, based not alone on the complaint that our taxes are too large, but on the inequality of our taxation methods. There is every indication that there will be considerable activity along this line in the near future and The Progress hopes to be able to give more information on the topic as it develops.

POTATO GROWERS OF STATE WILL MEET ON FRIDAY

Clearfield County Spud Growers Should Fall in Line With Others And Help Erect Hospital.

ALL DAY SESSION

The largest group of farmers to meet together in one spot in this grand old State of ours, is expected, on the 25th of August, at the Pennsylvania State College, when the potato growers of the State will meet and break ground for the new hospital that will be erected by funds donated by the potato growers from each county of the State.

Last year, your State College, the only State Institution of higher learning in the State, and depending entirely on State funds for maintenance, turned away over one thousand boys and girls from its doors, because of lack of room. A deplorable fact to say the least. It was this condition that started the movement, by the alumnae and friends of the college, to raise, by public subscription, two millions of dollars this fall. The potato men of the State quickly grasped the idea of erecting a hospital as their share of the campaign To say the hospital is needed is putting it mildly, when we know the facts. With over three thousand students enrolled, the present hospital facilities are only six cots in a little hut at the edge of the town, to accommodate and take care of the sick. What would be the result if an epidemic broke out?

Pledges have already been sent in-

MINERS RETURN TO WORK AT CAMPBELL CREEK OPERATIONS

Charleston, West Va., Aug. 22.—Four hundred union miners marched into the pits of the Campbell Creek Coal Company, near here, at daybreak today resuming operations which had been suspended since the strike began April 1st. The spectre of famine which for months has haunted the shanties of the district faded as the workers began their feverish efforts to help replenish the nation's coal supply. Pale faced women and children, worn from a summer of marked suffering, smiled from their shanty doors as the army of peace marched by. They were waiting for the first pay check which will mean food and plenty.

FRAMING MEASURE TO PREVENT COAL FROM ROCKETING

Washington, D. C, Aug. 22.—A new law to curb coal profiteering is being framed by Administration Cabinet members at the suggestion of President Harding. Several plans have been submitted to Attorney General Daugherty and he is expected to confer with Secertaries Hoover and Davis today in an effort to find a satisfactory measure. Unexpected legal difficulties are upsetting the attempt to provide Federal supervision of fuel prices.

DOLLAR DAY NEXT FRIDAY EVENT OF GREAT MOMENT TO SHOPPERS

Clearfield's remarkable bargain event—the semi-annual recurrence of Dollar Day—is scheduled for next Friday, August 25th, and every live merchant in the town is preparing for the greatest merchandising event in the history of this good old town.

These dollar day occassions are looked forward to by the patrons of Clearfield stores as real money saving events, and that this is so is due entirely to the spirit in which our merchants regard these semi-annual events. Each one has been much better and more successful than the one which preceded it, while Friday's Dollar Day, from our knowledge of present conditions and arrangements, will far eclipse anything thus far attempted along this line.

Read the announcements of the different merchants regarding their offerings upon Dollar Day and you will agree with us that the occasion this time means real worth-while bargains and many of them.

Watch this paper for further announcements. It will mean much to every careful buyer.

DETECTIVES AGAIN VISIT CLEARFIELD IN ROBBERY CASE

New York Central Railroad Detective, Harold Fisher, and City Detective James Kucera, of Cleveland, who are working on the case against Lee R. Linsenbigler and Sherwood Kramer, formerly of Clearfield, and Lake Shore Engineer Jones and former Railroad Detective Yeager, arrested at Cleveland on Sunday, August 13th, charged with wholesale robbery of freight cars in the New York Central yards at Elyria and Cleveland, came back to Cleanfield yesterday and with Constable Lee Sunderland spent the time up till noon today in an effort to locate more of the stolen merchandise, which they thought might be here. They secured a search warrant from 'Squire Chorpenning for the store of August Marano in the Fourth Ward but a careful search of the premises failed to discover anything at all and Mr. Marano was absolved of all suspicion in the matter by the detectives, who were convinced that he had no connection whatever with the affair.

Denies He Stole Automobiles.

Detective Kucera, in conversation with a Progress representative, said he had a long talk with Linsenbigler in the Cleveland jail regarding the alleged stolen automobiles which were sold here. Linsenbigler denied having stolen them or knowing they were stolen. He said he purchased his Buick car in 1919 from George Helms, of Cleveland, and sold it to another man in Ohio, whom he did

Jimmy Bishop started for Houtzdale this morning in a balky Ford. The Henry spit, spat and sputtered going down through East End and tried by every way known to a recalcitrant flivver to "take the bit in its teeth." Jimmy however with a firm hand held the Henry in the straight and narrow path until the Kurtz farm was reached. Here the Ford became so unruly that the driver was forced to turn the plagued old thing about and start back for town.

As was to be expected Jimmy was pretty darned hot, but the Henry was hotter, and every time the former unbosomed himself and let loose a flood of the sulphurous things in his heart against all Fords, and this one in particular, the flivver would hump its back while its blushes would fairly melt the few remaining scales of enamel off its rusty fenders. Finally human nature and the Ford could stand it no longer and just opposite the Sewer Pipe Works both burst into flames, but Jimmy was on top; and it was a good thing he was A sheet of flame enveloped his feet and running gears and with a yell that would have done credit to a Comanche Indian in the "old west" Jimmy hopped out of that old boat and allowed her to run her nose into the bank where the flames rapidly eat out her cantankerous life and everything else about her while Jimmy danced about the funeral pyre in glee—after he had doused the fire that was rapidly climbing up his pants legs.

The Ford is a complete wreck but Jimmy has about recovered.

GREAT YEAR AHEAD FOR HUNTERS SAYS SECTY. GORDON

Preliminary Survey Of Game Shows Big Increase In All Kinds Of Game In This State.

BEARS INCREASE

Harrisburg, Aug. 22. (U. P.)—The most successful hunting season in many years in Pennsylvania was predicted for the coming fall by Secretary Seth Gordon of the Game Commission today based on reports from game officials in every section of the State.

While the forecast depended on weather and food conditions, Gordon said sportsmen had every reason to expect an unusually favorable season. Gordon stressed the need of cooperation on the part of hunters, especially in the way of conservative killing of ruffed grouse and no killing of spike bucks.

The estimates of conditions for the various principal kinds of game were as follows:

"Deer.—Deer have increased very rapidly throughout the entire State through the establishment of new refuges and re-stocking sections that were looked upon as entirely "shot out," and will supply good deer hunting this year. The old established deer territory of the State will furnish better sport than ever. The total kill for 1922 may reach 7,000 bucks, if weather conditions are favorable, which would be an increase of approximately 2,000 over the 1921 season.

Elk.—Elk seem to be increasing in several sections of the State, although continually causing considerable annoyance to property owners in other portions of the State.

Bear.—Reports indicate that bears

HUG, KISS, $1,000.00, JUST LIKE A DREAM, FIND THE WOMAN

Chicago, Aug. 22.—A hearty kiss, a surreptitious hug, $1,000 in small bills—all from a beautiful lady rivaling the dreams of poets.

And then the lady disappeared.

But if the lady doesn't appear, Nicholas J. Hoffman, an ex-service man, may go to prison, possibly die, for he has already been in five government hospitals.

Hoffman was arrested charged with having stolen an automobile. The ex-service man says he bought the car with $1,000 given him by the aforementioned beautiful lady.

"On the night of July 20," says he, "I was at Ardmore Beach. Suddenly I heard a scream. It came from a beautiful young lady dressed in a one-piece bathing suit. As she went down for the third time I jumped in and rescued her."

She did not reveal her name, continues Hoffman, but asked him to meet her at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, where she would reward him. This she did, giving him $1,000, the kiss and the hug.

Now, as the French say: "Find the woman."

FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS:—

The Child Lover Stories.

By A Lover of Boys and Girls.

"A WEE LITTLE BABY"

After Mary passed the happy time thinking about becoming the Mama of the Child Lover, one night a most wonderful thing happened. What do you think it was? There was laid in her arms the sweetest little baby. He was her own dear little baby. She knew this was the Child Lover and her heart was happier than ever. The baby was so little and so cute. He was her very own to love and care for. And she would take the very best care of Him for her Heavenly Father. The beautiful Mother cuddled Him up close to her heart. She sang to Him. She thanked her Heavenly Father that she could now be His helper in caring for the Child Lover.

Over the hills where the baby Child Lover was in His Mother's arms, a beautiful star was shining very, very brightly. It seemed to say to everybody, "Come and see the Child Lover as a wee little baby. When you see Him, you will love Him."

Over in a field, some shepherds were asleep. They were staying with their flocks of sheep during the night. A bright light woke them. They were frightened by it. But a voice said to them," Do not be afraid. The light will not hurt you. I have a wonderful message for you. The Child Lover has come. He is a wee little baby in His Mother's arms right now. Over him and His beautiful mama a bright star is shining. You may go to see Him."

Then lots and lots of angels came. It looked as if Heaven was full of them and they wanted to let the shepherds know how glad they were to tell the wonderful news. And they were singing. How beautifully they sang! This was their song." The glory of the Heavenly Father is now in the Child Lover, who is the wee baby. Through this Child Lover everybody will learn to love everybody else. And the Heavenly Father will be very much pleased. For there will be the peace of love on the earth." Then the shepherds saw the angels go away, but the angels' song kept ringing in the ears of the shepherds.

The shepherds said to each other that they ought to go see the Child Lover of whom the angels sang. They looked for the bright star. They saw it. And as they followed it, they came to a place where they began to look for the wee little baby. They were not long looking and they were just as happy as they could be for they saw the beautiful Mother with the wee little baby held close to her heart. They knew this was the Child Lover. How glad they were that they had come to see Him. They loved Him as the star seemed to say they would. And as we boys and girls think of the wee little Child lover, we love Him too; don't we?

They told the Mother about the angels. They bowed their heads before the baby Child Lover and worshipped Him. They thanked the Father in Heaven for what He had done for Boys and girls in sending Child Lover as a wee little baby. So with their hearts full of joy they went back to their sheep they had left in the field.

The beautiful Mother had wonderful thoughts in her heart about the dear little baby she loved more than ever. The more she looked into His face the more her heart was filled with joy. How happy every boy and girl may be today, because the Child Lover was once a wee little baby.

The potato men will not be asked to contribute anything further towards the two million dollar campaign fund, and it is sincerely hoped that the potato growers of Clearfield county will respond to this great cause as liberally as they can.

Whether you are able to contribute to this fund at once, or whether you pledge some in the future, or do not see fit to either give or pledge, we do hope that you will find it possible to attend the meeting, on the 25th, and have a chance to look over your State institution, and find out for yourself what it is, and what it means to the people of the State.

have increased quite rapidly. The provisions relative to killing bears in Potter county during 1921 will continue during 1922. This means any individual may kill an unlimited number of bears in Potter county during the open season, or he may kill a bear in any other county in the state and still go to Potter county and kill any number.

Rabbits.—Killing off thousands of weasels, foxes, and wild cats has helped the rabbits materially. Reports from all over the State indicate that rabbits are more plentiful than for many years past.

Wild turkeys.—Reports indicate that these birds are increasing. The hatching and rearing season was quite favorable and there will be fully as many or more turkeys in most sections of the State than last season.

Ruffed grouse.—Reports indicate this "king of American game birds" is again gradually increasing thruout the State. In some sections they were so reduced in numbers about 1917 that no perceptible increase has been noted, but with careful protection and continued conservative killing on the part of the sportsmen and keeping out forest fire, the ruffed grouse will again become fairlry plentiful and supply good shooting for many years to come.

Ring neck pheasants. — Ring-neck pheasants are apparently increasing in many sections of the State.

Quail.—Of the 31,600 quail stocked since 1915, more than 25,000 of these birds were stocked during the past two springs. Reports indicate that quail are found almost everywhere throughout the lower half of the State.

TURTLE? NO!

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After eight years of married life, MARK SABRE comes to realize that he is neither understood by his prosaic and snobbish wife, MABEL, nor by his colleagues in the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre. A promised partnership in the business has been denied him and promised to TWYNING, a jealous associate. Suddenly an old sweetheart, NONA, now the wife of the dashing LORD TYBAR, returns after two years of travel. Mabel becomes jealous of Nona, who visits Sabre at his office. Sabre suspects that Nona is not happy with Tybar. In the conversation in the office Sabre realizes that Nona can give him the sympathy and understanding that he craves.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Clearly, as it were yesterday, he remembered the day she had declared to him her choice. In the Cathedral cloisters. Walking together. And suddenly, in the midst of indifferent things, she told him, "I say, Marko, I'm going to marry Lord Tybar."

And his reply, the model of indifference. "Are you, Nona?"

He came upon the picture of himself alone with Nona—alone with her watching her beautiful face—and saying to her, "Look here, there were three things you said, three expressions you used. Explain them, Nona. Explain 'There!' with your glove off. Explain 'Flotsam.' Explain 'Well, I had to come.' Explain them, Nona—for God's sake."

CHAPTER V

I

BUT it was October before he asked her to explain them. The Tybars, as he learnt when he next met her, a week after her visit to the office, were only at Northrepps for a breathing space after their foreign tour. Through the summer they were going the usual social round, ending in Scotland. Back in October for the shooting, and wintering there through the hunting season.

There was the occasion of a little dinner party at Northrepps to which he had come with Mabel; Major Hopscotch Millet and one or two others were among the guests.

Nona came with them to the door on their departure. Sabre was just down the steps. "Well, I shan't see you again till October," she said.

"No, till October." He had no more than touched her hand and turned away.

She was close behind him. He heard her give the tiniest little catch at her breath. She said, "Shall I write to you, Marko?"

He turned towards her. She was smiling as though it was a chatting remark she had made. Her shield!

And he answered her from behind his own shield, "Oh, well, I'm bad at letters, you know."

But their eyes met with no shields before them; and she was wounded, for he just caught her voice as he went down the steps, "Oh, Marko, do write to me!"

He got into the cab. Major Millet had taken the seat next to Mabel.

As the horse turned, Mabel inquired, "What was Lady Tybar talking to you about all that time?"

He said, "Oh, just saying goodbye."

But he was thinking, "That's a fourth question: Why did you say 'Oh, Marko, do write to me!' Or was that the answer to the other questions, although I never asked them."

CHAPTER VI

I

A DRAPER occupied the house opposite Fortune, East and Sabre's. On an October afternoon, just before five o'clock, Sabre saw Nona alight from her car and go into the draper's. He put on his hat and coat and descended into the street. As he crossed the road she came out.

"Hello, Marko!"

"What about having some tea somewhere?"

"I think that's a good idea."

He suggested the Chaister Tea Rooms. She spoke to the chauffeur and accompanied him.

Nona knew some account of her summer visitations. Sabre spoke a little of local business. But the subjects were but skirmishers thrown out before dense armies of thoughts that massed behind, and rolled, and rolled away. When pretence of dragging out the meal could no longer be maintained, Nona looked at her watch. "Well, I must be getting back. We haven't had a particularly enormous tea, but the chauffeur's had notice."

Sabre said, "Yes, let's get out of this." It was as though the thing had been a strain.

He put her into the car. She was so very, very quiet. He said, "I've half a mind to drive up with you. I'd like a ride, and a walk back."

II

They were within the gates.

"I OUGHT TO HAVE MARRIED YOU, MARKO."

had been a dull day. Evening stood palely far up the long avenue of the drive and in the distance about the park on either hand. Among October's crossing leaves, a small disquiet stirred. The leaves banked orderly between their parent trunks. Sabre noticed as a curious thing now, when they stirred, they only trembled in their massed formation, not broke their ranks, as if some live thing ran beneath them.

He said, "Do you know what this seems to me? It seems as though it was only yesterday, or this morning, that you came to see me at the office and we talked. Well, I want it to be only yesterday. I want to go on from there."

She said, "Yes."

He hardly could hear the word. He looked at her. She was as tall as he. Not least of the contributions to her beauty in his eyes was the supple grace of her stature. But her face was averted; and he wanted terribly to see her face. "Stand round and look at me, Nona." He touched her arm. "I want to see your face."

She turned towards him and raised [illegible] "Oh, what is it [illegible] Marko?"

There was that which glistened upon her lower lids; and about her mouth were trembling movements; and in her throat a pulse beating.

He said, "It's you I want to say something. I want you to explain some things. Some things you said, Nona, when you came to my room that day and shook hands you said, "There!" when you gave me your hand. You took off your glove and said 'There.' I want to know why you said 'There!' And you said, 'Well, I had to come.' And you said you were flotsam. And that night—when we'd been up to you—you said, 'Oh, Marko, do write to me.' I want you to explain what you meant."

She said, "Oh, how can you remember, you must explain."

He answered "Because I remember, you must explain."

"Please let me sit down, Marko." She faltered a little lamely. "I can explain better sitting down."

A felled trunk had been shored against the trees facing towards the parkland. They went to it and he sat beside her. She sat upright but bending forward a little over her crossed knees, her hands clasped on them, looking before her across the park.

"No, you must look at me," he said.

She very slowly turned her body towards him. He thought her most beautiful and the expression of her beautiful face was most terrible to him in all his emotions.

III

She spoke very slowly, almost with a perceptible pause between each word. She said, "Well, I'll tell you. I said 'flotsam,' didn't I? It is explain that you know what flotsam is, Marko. Have you ever looked it up in the dictionary? The dictionary says it terribly. 'Goods shipwrecked and found floating on the sea.' I'm twenty-eight, Marko. I suppose that's not really very old. It seems a terrible age to me. You see, you judge age by what you are in contrast with what you were. If you're very happy I think it can't matter how old you are. If you look back to when you were happy and then come to know when you're not, it seems a most terrible and tremendous self-control you see yourself just floating—drifting further and further away from the hoping years and just being taken along, taken along, to God knows where, God knows to what."

She put out the palms of her hands towards where in the evening [illegible] London suddenly across the park. "That's very frightening, Marko."

"Well, all the time there was you, Marko. In those two years when we were away it got awful. In those two years I knew I was flotsam. One day—in India—I went and looked at it in the little dictionary in my writing case, and I knew I was. Do you know what I did? I crossed out flotsam in the dictionary and wrote Nona. There it was and it was the most exact thing—Nona: goods shipwrecked and found floating in the sea. I meant to have torn out the page. I forgot. I left it there and Tony saw it."

Sabre said, "What did he say?" In all she had told him there was something omitted. He knew that his question approached the missing quantities. But she did not answer it.

He had desired her to look at him, but it was he who first turned away. He sat with his head between his hands, his elbows on his knees.

She repeated, with rather a plaintive note, as though in his pose she saw some pain she had caused him, "You see, I had known you all my life, Marko—"

He said, still looking upon the ground between his feet. "But you haven't explained anything. You've only told me. You haven't explained why."

She said with astounding simplicity, "Well, you see, Marko, I made a mistake. I guess a most frightful mistake. I chose. I chose wrong. I ought to have married you, Marko."

Any last words were a groan. "Nona—Nona—"

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Those first or earliest Americans of ours were sure some queer "birds," with queerer customs. Here is some evidence of that fact worth reading:

A Bangor, Maine, attorney attending court in the ancient town of Wiscasset, Lincoln County, spent a rainy afternoon rummaging through the colonial records of the place, and in the course of his reading came across the official registration of a "smock marriage." Not knowing what a "smock marriage" was, he looked further and got some light on a custom that prevailed in England and in some of the colonies as well in the eighteenth century.

Smock marriages were weddings where the bride appeared dressed only in a white chemise or sheet. The reason for it was the belief that if a man married a woman who was in debt he could be held liable for what she owned if he received with her any of her property; and also that if a woman married a man who was in debt his creditors could not take her property to satisfy their claims if he had received nothing from her at marriage. In England, says an antiquarian, there was at least one case where a bride was in paris naturalibus while the ceremony was being performed in the great church at Birmingham. The minister at first refused to perform the ceremony, but could find nothing in the rubric to prevent it, so he married the pair.

To carry out the law fully as the people understood it the ceremony should always have been performed as it was in the Birmingham case but various expedients were contrived to get around it. Sometimes the bride stood in a closet and put her hand through a hole in the door; sometimes she stood behind a cloth screen and put her hand out at one side again, she would wind about her a white sheet furnished by the bride groom; sometimes she stood in her chemise, or "smock." Eventually, in Essex County, immodesty and embarrassment were avoided by the groom furnishing all the clothes worn by the bride retaining title in the same in himself. This he did in the presence of witnesses that he might be able to prove the fact in the event that he was sued for any debts she might have contracted.

A marriage of this kind was performed in Bradford in 1773, the following being a true copy of the record:

A "Foxy" Bridegroom

"Bradford, Dec. ye 24, 1773:

"This may certifie whomsoever it may concerne that James Bailey of Bradford, who was married to the widow Mary Bacon Nov. 22 last past [illegible] subscriber then declared [illegible] the said [illegible] without [illegible] of Thomas Stickney & Margaret the wife of Caleb Burbank, all of Bradford witnesses that the clothes she then had on were of his providing and bestowing upon her.

"WILLIAM BALCH, minister of ye Gospel."

It is noted by the same writer that in all cases of smock marriages that have come to his knowledge the brides have been widows. It is thought that during the reign of George III. there were as many smock marriages in Maine, then part of the Province of Massachusetts Bay chiefly in the Counties of Lincoln and York, or in the territory that now is so known. One such marriage is reported in the archives of the Town of Friendship, Knox County, originally known as Meduncook (signifying Sandy Harbor.) It is also one of the few instances in Maine history where advantage was taken of the provision of the law that in a community where there resided neither minister nor magistrate a man and woman who appeared before witnesses, read the marriage service to each other and signed a marriage agreement became lawfully wedded.

Married Themselves

Such a marriage was performed in 1773, and the record on the town books reads:

"Certificate—This may certify all whom it concerns that W. Elwell, of Meduncook hath been duly published to Hannah Thomas of Meduncook.

"(Sd) SEDATE WADSWORTH.
'clerk Meduncook April ye 18th, 1772'

"Meduncook, May 12th. 1772
Whereas the subscribers, Wm. Elwell and Hannah Thomas being lawfully published & desirous of entering into the holy state of Marriage & being confined in a place where here is neither a minister or a magistrate do by these presents & in the presence of Almighty God & before these witnesse that may sign this instrument, engage & do take each other as man and wife, according to the laws of God and man, according to the best of our capacities & although we were married by a magistrate of minister. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands:

'WILLIAM ELWELL
'HANNAH THOMAS, her X mark."

"Signed in the presence of we the subscribers, & that the man took her, as were naked & gave her clothes to put on—Wm. E. Frost, Samuel Condon, Cornelius Morton, Mary Condon, her X mark, Otis Pinkham, Jerey W. Larry, her X mark.

"N. B.—Wm. Elwell & Hannah Thomas took the common prayer book after they had signed the above instrument & read the church ceremony of marriage to each other in serious manner before the witnesses to the above instrument before me—Wm Frost.

"The afore-said William Elwell & Hannah Thomas were married in the above manner, May 12th, 1772—they Got child named Hannah, was born June ye 21st, 1773; their second child, a son, named Elias, born April ye 5th 1776."

There is nothing to show that the practice of smock marriage outlived the Revolution. In Maine, up to 1852, a husband was liable for debts of his wife contracted before marriage and no such subterfuge as the smock marriage could relieve him, considering the glory of the bridal finery of today.

The reason why all forms of meat, cheese and eggs form so satisfying a diet is not because they are rich in calories but because they are rich in proteid. In order to be properly nourished one may paraphrase the famous proverb, "Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves," and make it read, 'Take care of the proteid and the calories will take care of themselves."

WOMAN COULD NOT WORK

FOUR MEDALS ON HIS BREAST

Carl M. Lange of Nebraska Is That State's Most Decorated World War Veteran.

Four medals on his breast and the French cord on his arm make Carl M. Lange of Hartington, Neb., that state's most decorated World war veteran. Comparatively few men who fought for or with France have had the coveted Medaille Militaire bestowed on them. This decoration goes only to enlisted men and to commanders-in-chief of armies in the field. No officer in between is eligible to receive the medal. Yet Lange was awarded two. One Marshal Petain pinned on his O. D. Several months after the armistice Lange opened a registered package with a French stamp on it and found another Medaille Militaire.

The highest honor Nebraska could give one of its World war heroes went to Lange also. He was chosen by the state commander of the American Legion to officially represent Nebraska at the burial in Arlington cemetery of the "Unknown Soldier." The Distinguished Service cross, bestowed personally by General Pershing, the Croix de Guerre with palms and the knowledge that he carried Merle Hay from the trenches are other things that remind Lange of his war service. Hay was the first Iowa boy killed in the war and one of the first three American boys to die in action.

The Private's Dilemma.

I'd like to be a corpril and with the corpris stand,
A chevron on my coat sleeve and a warrant in my hand
But when I think it over all my hope to gloom descends,
I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends

The private marches dumbly—this way, that way, what's the odds?
While the corpril joins the shouting when the order's "Right by squads!"
But when the drill is over then the corpril's glory ends,
Oh, I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends

The extra pay comes handy and the chevron makes one proud,
But it's tough to be a noncom when your heart is with the crowd,
To persecute your buddies with commands the captain sends,
Yes, I'd like to be a corpril—but I'd rather have my friends'

SINGLE MEN GET INTO MORE TROUBLE THAN MARRIED, SAY STATE TROOPERS

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 19.—(U. P.)—Single men get into more trouble than married men.

Complete tabulated reports of arrests made by the Pennsylvania State Police during 1921 made public here today showed that 7,141 single men arrested compared to only 5,767 married men.

The "dangerous age" proved to be 24. More men were arrested at that age than at any other.

Women caused the State troopers almost no trouble. Out of a total of nearly 13,000 arrests only 706 were women.

Human failings were indicated in comparative importance by the following principal causes for arrest: avarice 5,550; recklessness, 4,289; alcoholic stimulant 1,270; revenge 1,026.

Thirty-seven ten year olds became so dangerous to the peace of the Commonwealth that they had to be arrested. One man of 80 was likewise caught in the net of Pennsylvania's mounted guardians of the law.

Of all the prisoners rounded up by the troopers 11,798 were for first offenses, 178 for second offenses and 932 were habitual criminals

NATION'S GREATEST CONCERN IS PEACE HARDING DECLARES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—This Country's principal concern is for peace and the securities of peace, President Harding declared today in an address to one thousand citizen soldiers he reviewed on the grounds back of the White House. There is no thought of armed warfare and no desire to carry out an armed campaign in the construction the President said in explaining the effort of the country to induce the young men of the country to enter the soldiers' training camps.

PREPAREDNESS AGAIN

Washington D. C. Aug. 22.—American manhood is rising to the necessity for military preparedness, in the opinion of Geenral John J. Pershing head of the army of the United States. The people of the country are displaying a greater interest in military training now than at any time since the signing of the armistice. General Pershing's statements are regarded as particularly significant coming as they do immediately after President Harding's address yesterday to a large body of citizen soldiers in which he said that America wants no more war but wants to be prepared for war.

PROGRESS ON COAL INVESGTIGATING COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 22.—The Harding proposal for a commission to investigate every phase of the coal industry will be forced through Congress before the end of the week, it was believed here today. Senator Borah's bill creating a coal commission of five members was reported favorably to the House by the committee on labor. The bill, approved by President Harding, is expected to receive prompt and favorable action in the Senate this week. At the suggestion of Mr. Harding, the personnel of the committee was raised from three to five members and the time limit in which the commission will be required to report its findings to Congress was cut from nine to five months.

President Harding wants the committee that makes the investigation into the coal industry to be composed only of representatives of the public, it was said at the White House today. Announcement of the President's opposition to a tripartite commission composed of representatives of the miners, operators and the public was made shortly after the Senate labor committee reported Senator Borah's bill to the Senate.

Rail Heads And Shop Craft Unions Are Silent On Meeting of Tomorrow

New York, Aug. 21.—Preliminary to the session of the Association of Railway Executives on Wednesday when members will vote their attitude towards a proposal of the Big Five brotherhoods for ending the shop crafts strike, the eastern president's conference today held a secret meeting to formulate a policy for its 11 members to promote at the nations' session. What action the eastern roads, which include several of the most powerful lines, will finally pursue, was not indicated, those attending asserting they had been pledged to secrecy. The only comment was made by L. F. Loree, of the Delaware & Hudson, who issued a statement setting forth that Atlantic coast roads which normally employ 161,339 shopmen, had brought the forces up to 71.6 per cent of that figure on August 18. This represents an increase of 2.5 per cent over the week ending August 11, the statement indicated.

"It was expected that the ratio of increase of August 11 would be continued on the 18th but the occurrence of last week put a damper on recruiting" said Mr. Loree. "Nothing can be more destructive than to introduce a feeling of uncertainty into a situation such as this." Those that were present at the conference were the one who led the opposition when the national body of chiefs rejected the President's two proposals for ending the strike by submitting the controversy issue to the labor board. The wall of silence thrown about the strike situation was maintained today by both sides.

TESTING FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Reports Show That Eradication Work Can Be Carried on Without Destroying Industry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That testing cattle for tuberculosis and the cleaning up of infected herds are having a permanent effect in reducing the extent of the disease is shown conclusively by figures recently collected by the United States Department of Agriculture from inspectors in charge of the eradication work in various parts of the country. The inspectors were asked to supply figures on the results of three or more tests on badly diseased herds, those that had not less than 10 per cent of reactors on the first test. The first test on more than 58,000 cattle in these bad herds showed that 20 per cent had tuberculosis. Another test six months later on the same herds, from which the reactors had been removed, showed only 6.9 per cent of the disease. By another six months the percentage had gone down to 2.8. A fourth test on more than 25,000 of these cattle showed only 1.8 per cent of tuberculosis.

The reports from which these figures were taken show that under normal conditions herds very badly diseased may be established as relatively free in a short time. They also show that eradication work can be carried on without destroying the cattle industry as is sometimes thought. Erratic results were obtained on a very few of the 1882 herds tested, the list of this class containing less than 100. Out of the 126,668 herds under observation December 1, 1921, there were only a very few that had not shown satisfactory improvement as a result of testing.

If Any of These Cows Have Tuberculosis the Hogs Following Them Are Certain to Get the Disease.

PREVENT ANIMAL DISEASES

By Taking Proper Precautionary Measures Many Ailments Could Be Thwarted.

Many of the diseases suffered by live stock on the farm could be prevented by proper precautionary measures, according to Dr Robert Graham of the University of Illinois. Nearly all diseases to which animals succumb are preventable, he declares, and the surest way to keep your animals healthy is to adopt such health measures as will prevent them from getting sick.

The continuous use of old feed lots year after year without regard to rotation is one way to spread disease. Each class of live stock has its own peculiar ailments which may be largely eliminated by the rotation of feed lots.

Keep yourself posted as to what diseases are prevalent in your neighborhood, and then do everything in your power to keep your own live stock from getting them.

FEEDS FOR WORKING HORSES

Mature Animals Require Starchy or Carbonaceous Rations to Furnish Needed Fuel.

The character of feed required by horses that are working is quite different from that required by young growing animals or dairy cows. Mature horses need starchy or carbonaceous feeds to furnish fuel rather than large amounts of protein. For this reason corn and timothy hay may be fed more liberally than such protein feeds as wheat and alfalfa. Oats furnish most of the protein needed, and a good rule for feeding a horse doing moderate work is given as one and one-fourth pounds of hay and three fourths pound of grain to each hundred pounds of wheat, but horses at hard work are sometimes given as much as one and one-fourth pounds of grain.

PASTURE IS PIG ESSENTIAL

Rape, Alfalfa and Clover Are Bone and Muscle Building Feeds and Cheapen Gains.

Pasture is of course vital to the best development of pigs. Rape, alfalfa or clover should be available to the spring pigs, as these forages contain much bone and muscle-building feed, and they help to cheapen gains.

DETECTIVES AGAIN

not know.

Regarding the Chandler car, which he traded in when he bought his Hupmobile, he said he purchased from a fellow who sat beside him at the Cleveland ball park. Said he didn't know his name but that he paid $1,100 for it. This car was identified by Detective Kucera yesterday as a car stolen from the Milwaukee Insurance Company and was taken on Cleveland Heights in 1921.

Linsenbigler also said he got the Ford coupes he sold here from Bert Jones, the railroad man arrested with him at Cleveland. The car purchased by Robert Leavy he alleges cost him $425. The one purchased by Robert Gray, he says, he paid Jones $400 for and went to Pittsburg to meet Jones with the car, driving it to Clearfield from there himself. The car sold to S. C. Watts was purchased from Jones for $375, he says.

How the Cars Were Robbed.

In speaking of the car robberies, Fisher said Yeager, the railroad detective, would open the cars in the yard at Elyria and kick the bales and bundles of merchandise out along the tracks, when the others would come along and load it on the Reo truck they used and haul it the intervening twenty-six miles into Cleveland. The Reo truck used, the detective says, was stolen in Buffalo, N. Y.

How They Were Picked Up.

The Saturday night previous to the arrest, one hundred cars were robbed in the Elyria and Cleveland yards and the detectives working on the series of robberies had developed their case to the point where they knew who the robbers were. Four officers drove to the Jones home on Cleveland Heights and waited till almost morning for the coming of the truck load of loot. They parked their car in the driveway to the Jones garage and it was there when the truck occupied by Jones, Linsenbigler and Kramer came along. Seeing the car parked in the driveway, the truck, instead of turning in, continued on. By this time the detectives thought they had missed the outfit and, getting in their machine, went to headquarters for information. Meantime the truck was driven some distance beyond the Jones home and returning to find the other machine had pulled out, decided it had been some casual traveler parked there, drove into the garage with their truck. They were sitting the breakfast table when the detectives returned, and bursting in on them, placed the three men under arrest. Yeager was picked up afterwards.

Have Hearing Today.

Jones and Yeager succeeded in securing $2,500 bail each and were released for the hearing which takes place today. Detective Kucera says the quartette will be given a hearing in municipal court today, following which they will be turned over to the United States court for final disposition, the crime of car robbing being an offense against inter-State commerce laws.

Loot Recovered Taken Back.

The Chandler car and the rugs recovered on the first visit of Detective Fisher to Clearfield were taken back by him to Cleveland today. Detective Kucera said he didn't believe the purchasers of the stolen Fords would ever be required to turn over their coupes as it was almost impossible to locate the original owners who had no doubt been reimbursed for their losses by the insurance companies and the changed numbers making it hard to identify them.

Visiting Detective Pays Fine.

Detective Fisher, who was at the Penn Motor Sales Co. last evening, had an altercation with Norman Linsenbigler, a brother of Lee. Fisher was in the office at the garage when Linsenbigler came in to use the telephone. He accused Fisher of trying to overhear his conversation over the 'phone and after an exchange of "pleasantries" the detective struck Linsenbigler across the face and put him out of the place. Linsenbigler made information against Fisher before 'Squire Joseph John and Constable Reilley arrested him about 9 o'clock last night. It cost Fisher $6.25.

fixing problem. The efforts of the commission have been bent towards discovering a way to prevent profiteering and at the same time to stimulate coal production in the State to its fullest capacity. There is little likelihood that the commission will reach a decision on a fair price today, it was said, but it was believed that the way will be cleared by a full discussion of the question.

Women to Sit In House of Lords, Says Lady Rhondda, In U. S.

New York, Aug. 19.—Because principle and right always triumph, eventually all countries will pass laws for the protection of children and will grant equal political right to women.

Such is the prediction of Viscountess Rhondda, British coal magnate, reformer and political leader, just arrived in this country for a five-week holiday in the Connecticut hills.

The viscountess won world-wide notice when her application for membership in the House of Lords was turned down last May.

"Principle is bound to win," she declares. "That's why I am sure women will yet sit in the House of Lords. Politics has postponed but cannot bar the day when this will be.

Era of Justice Ahead.

"In England, as here, justice to women, children and the oppressed is beginning to be done. The Six Point Group, composed of women, is working especially along these lines.

"We chose our six points because they embodied important reforms we believed the public would rally about. One of the most important is a bill to protect young girls from assault.

"Through the activity of our two women members of Parliament, we have already obtained partial action in this matter.

"At least, we have got through a bill which makes it no longer possible for a man to defend himself against assault charges by claiming that he thought the girl was over 16, the age of consent.

"If she really was under age, he must be punished, no matter what he thought.

LADY RHONDDA

Seek Widow's Pension.

"Another measure for which we are working hard is a pension bill for widowed mothers. In an effort to get equal pay for women, we have selected teachers and civil service employes to begin with, since they are paid, either directly or indirectly by the government.

"We constantly hear in England that your women teachers are paid as much as your men. That is one point I shall be interested to investigate.

"Another bill we are pushing in the interest of justice is one to raise the status of children born out of wedlock. The law now holds the child responsible for its parents' fault.

"Public opinion is especially on our side in this matter. The ideal of justice also will be upheld when we have had mothers made equal guardians of their children with the fathers."

Lady Rhondda has been called the "busiest" rich woman in England. She inherited millions from her father, food controller of Great Britain during the war, but she puts in 12 hours a day working for the 27 social and political reform measures she sponsors.

Her mode of living is simple. Her name was not on the passenger list of the ship on which she came here and her vacation in Connecticut will be entirely minus social frills.

Her manner is cordial and unaffected. In dress, too, she prefers the unostentatious. When seen here, she wore a loose, dark blue crepe de chine frock, cut for comfort rather than fashion.

She is typically British in appearance—tall, robust, with deep-blue eyes, fluffy brown hair, clear skin and high color. She speaks easily and to the point, with understanding and humor.

In addition to her work for women and children, Lady Rhondda personally manages the huge coal mine interests which came to her from her father. She is said to apply the good business sense gained thereby in her political campaigns and to have won a number of points through her experience in commerce.

Lady Rhondda will return to England the middle of September to aid in pushing a number of women's bills.

Resolutions Adopted By Clearfield Co. Pomona Grange No. 33 Aug. 3rd

We, the undersigned committee on resolutions, appointed by the Worthy-Master, respectfully recommend the following resolutions:

1. In order to encourage the boys and girls in animal husbandry, we recommend that the Grange Insurance Co., of Clearfield County write a policy on all domestic animals covered by the boys and girls clubs, insuring against death from any cause.

2. Recognizing the grandeur and sublimity of the Grange Work, we recommend that each subordiate grange establish a school of instruction to teach the work ritual, and that each new member be required to learn the work of each degree before advancement, and that all officers be required to commit the work to memory so that it can be put on without referring to the annal.

3. In order to extend the efficiency of the Public Schools, and to give all our boys and girls an opportunity to educate themselves, we recommend the establishing of a County Public Library, under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and for this purpose that a permanent committee be appointed from this Pomona to take up the work, present it to the subordinate granges of the County, and to carry on propaganda until a library is established.

4. In the resolution adopted at the last meeting of this grange, the work of the Department of Public Education was condemned for its effort to "Germanize" our Public School System. We recommend that said resolution be re-adopted at this meeting and that every effort be made to destroy "Fineganism" in the school system of the State, and that the management of our schools be restored to its proper place in our state government.

5. We believe that public office is a public trust, and it is not for the furthering of private interests, and we deplore the present tendency to centralize both National and State Government, and every effort should be made to counteract this tendency, and to restore local government to the local people as contemplated by the fathers who established the American system.

6. While the Grange is not a political organization, and its members are expected to exercise their own judgment in the use of the franchise, yet the rights of the people are only safe guarded by the policies of political parties as set forth in their platform. We believe the time has come when it is a question of men, rather than parties, and what is known as "partyism" must be set aside and men be elected who have demonstrated their fitness for office, judged by their performance in life, rather than their regularity as party men, and when the granger knows of such a man, he should support him, and advocate his election.

7. Whereas there are a number of farmers in Clearfield County, who are breeding registered stock, and it has been almost impossible to obtain an accurate directory of the breeds of stock owned by each, and since some of the members of the Pomona Grange in adjoining counties have published a directory through its association of subordinate grange and the farm bureau.

Therefore, be it resolved that the Worthy Master of this Pomona Grange appoint a committee of three to assist the farm bureau to secure the proper information, and by the aid of the subordinate granges, and the farm bureau, to publish such information in a directory, to include both male and female of all registered stock.

8. This Grange tenders a vote of thanks to Kylertown Grange No. 1406 for their hospitality in entertaining the Pomona Grange No. 33 and that this Pomona hopes Kylertown Grange No. 1406 soon extends another invitation to us to be in their midst.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Two Things Life Taught Him.

The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many-planed aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single facet.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Necessity for Friction.

If a body once set in motion met with no opposition it would go in a straight line forever. Were it not for friction, nails would not hold and walking would be impossible. One realizes the truth of this when attempting to walk on smooth ice or a highly polished floor.

Peat is used in Ireland to such an extent that few people in the country districts ever burn coal. The odor of peat is healthful and pleasant, and it gives out neither fumes nor dirt.

Let Us Convince You That This Is Really The Home of BETTER PRINTING

Most folks associate the average newspaper with hurly burly printing, the kind that you don't care whether it's a good looking job or just "slammed" together. However, many folks who have tried us out on one piece of printing have been very agreeably surprised when the work was delivered. They found that even the rough job ---the one that they wanted in a real hurry---was done in a better way and they appreciated it. There was a close application to detail, there was everything done that would make it worth while.

OUT ON TIME

One of the things we are exceedingly cranky about is getting your work out when we promised it. Several folks, trying out our business printing department for the first time, have remarked, "Why, you have it done when you said you would" as if they really didn't expect it and didn't look for it.

But we get 'em out on time and just when we say we will. That should be a real argument for printing buyers who want what they want when they want it. And we don't know of anything that is more trying to anyone than having to wait for some printed piece when you have your plans all laid out to do something and then have to wait for the printing.

Again, let us impress on you---WE GET PRINTING OUT WHEN WE SAY WE WILL.

REAL CRAFTSMANSHIP

The man in charge of the better business printing department is a man who has had many years experience in the printing art. He knows the proper sort of type that will harmonize with the purpose for which you want the printing. He knows where to use a strong face of type; he knows where to use a light and dainty face. And, too, he is exceedingly particular about the way any printed piece is sent out—it must be just right, no half way measures, nor "that's good enough" way with him.

And then we have a designer and writer who can take hold of your rough idea and work it out so that about all you have to do is bring the idea and we put it in tangible shape for you.

We have gotten some very fine recommendation on work that has gone out of this department during the past few months and you'll find that if you'll put us against your hardest printing work, that you'll have it done just as you want it. Or if you put the entire idea up to us, you'll find that we catch your idea and put it through.

THE HOME RADIO

How to Make and Use It By A. HYATT VERRILL

XVII. LOOSE-COUPLED COILS

Coils, or, as they are more often called, tuning coils, are very essential parts of radio telegraphy and telephony. The old style tuning coil, as used in wireless telegraphy, has been largely superseded by the type known as loose-coupled coils or adjustable-coils which may be altered or adjusted to tune much finer or more closely than by the old type coil. Although it is not difficult to make a loose-coupled coil yet, as is the case with many of the parts of radio sets, it is as cheap and far more satisfactory to purchase them ready made. The conventional type of loose-coupled coil consists of two distinct coils, one within the other, as shown in Fig. 46. One of these is the primary coil, the other the secondary or induction coil. The two are so arranged that the inner or secondary coil slips back and forth within the larger or primary coil, thus varying the coupling or induction, for the electricity—or oscillations—in the secondary coil is merely induced by the primary circuit in the outer coil, so that if a portion of the secondary coil is withdrawn from the primary coil, as shown in the figure, there will be less induced current and in this way tuning is accomplished. To allow of still finer adjustment, the primary coil is provided with an adjustable slider A, and the secondary coil has a multi-pointed switch B.

Another type of loose-coupled coil is arranged so that one coil revolves within the other; while another type, which is the simplest of all for the amateur to construct and gives the best results, is composed of three discs or coils "stagger-wound" which may be adjusted back and forth. To make one of these inductors you will require some stiff, smooth cardboard, heavy Bristol board, thin fibreboard or similar composition and about half a pound of No. 24 D. C. C. wire. Also in setting up and arranging the coils, you will require binding posts, knobs, a little sheet brass and a few other odds and ends. With a pair of dividers or compasses draw three circles on the cardboard or fibre, each about four to five inches in diameter, having all exactly the same size. Then, using the dividers, scribe off an unequal number (five, seven, or nine) marks around the circumference of each circle. Fig. 47, A. Next, still using the dividers, draw a smaller circle, say one and one-half inches to two and one-half inches in diameter within each circle (B). If the circles are four inches in diameter use the smaller circle inside, if five inches the larger one, and with a rule draw radiating lines one-fourth of an inch apart from each of the marks on the outer circumference to the center of the circle (C). With a pair of scissors or a sharp knife (if cardboard is used) or a fine saw (if fibre), cut out the discs and cut slots in each disc according to the marks, as shown at (D).

Next, if you have used cardboard, give each slotted disc a thorough covering with shellac, using at least three coats, and when thoroughly dry proceed to wind the discs or coils. In doing this, start the wire—being sure to leave enough for connections—at a point at the inner end of one slot and wind over one segment and under the next, and as the number is uneven you will find that the wires will thus cross, as shown at (E). The number of times the wire should be passed can only be decided upon by experimenting after the coil is in use, but, as a starter, about twenty-five or thirty turns on one, about one and one-half times as many, or say thirty-eight to forty-five on the second, and twice as many on the third as on the first, or from fifty to sixty, will be somewhere near right. Then, by removing or adding a few turns, as you adjust your receivers you can finally secure the very best results. To mount this coil so it may be used, the coil or disc with the least turns, or, in other words, the primary coil, should be mounted rigidly and immovably and should be connected by means of binding posts to the aerial and ground wires. The secondary coil and the tickler coil should then be fastened to brass or metal strips about two or two and one-half inches long, one-sixteenth inch thick and half an inch wide. One end of each strip should be attached by small bolts or screws to the coils and the other end attached to a movable peg or bolt with a fibre or bakelite knob at the opposite end. Fig. 48 shows clearly how this is done. In this way, the secondary and tickler may be swung back and forth to cover more or less of the primary, but great care should be used that the tickler does not touch the primary coil. When the coil is thus mounted on a proper panel or stand, it should be wired as shown in Fig. 49, and when the whole set is in good working order and final adjustments made, it should all be enclosed in a neat wooden case with a hinged top or cover. Fig. 50, although of course this is merely a protective measure and does not affect the working efficiency of the set. It must be clearly understood, however, that this type of coil can only be used in connection with a vacuum-tube outfit as shown. When all wiring is complete and adjustments are ready to be made, connect the storage battery, as shown; place the lamp or tube in its socket and gradually turn on the rheostat to see if the tube glows properly. Never turn on the current to the bulb quickly or to full power, or the filament will be needlessly burnt out and wasted long before its time. Next, connect the B (or dry) battery, the ground and aerial and, finally, the phones.

In using this outfit, turn on the bulb slowly, adjust the knobs carrying the coils so that all three are in line and then adjust or tune the variable condenser until the signals you wish to hear are clear. Then, by gradually adjusting the movable coils, you can cut out interference and also make the signals, music or other sounds louder. When the two movable coils are entirely away from the primary coil you will have your shortest wave length, while when all three are together, you will have the longest wave length.

HOMESICK FOR THE ARMY

Ah Han Kook, Korean With Honorable Record in the U. S. A., Returns to the Service.

Born in Korea, taken to Hawaii when a child, without any trace of relatives, an honorable record in the United States army behind him, Ah Han Kook, a little brown man, called at the American Legion headquarters in Indianapolis the other day and declared his intention of "going back home" to the army.

"I was a dental officer's assistant in San Francisco," Kook, private first class and specialist fourth class, medical department, said, producing an honorable discharge to prove it. "The officer was Dr. H. C. Feyler, now of 822 Gay street, Portsmouth, O. He asked me to come to see him when I got out of the army. He is in private practice now. So when my enlistment expired in San Francisco, I got on a train and went to Portsmouth. The officer said he would like to have me work for him. He treated me very good and I had a pleasant visit with him, but I got homesick. The army is the only home I know. I am a member of the American Legion, Schofield Barracks, H. T., post No. 6, and I heard a lot about Legion headquarters in Indianapolis, so I thought I would like to see them."

Kook was shown about the offices at Legion headquarters and the various phases of the work explained to him. Then this little brown man, now an American citizen, who first entered military service in the National Guard at Hawaii in August, 1917, and continued the service through the national army and the regulars until May 26, 1922, departed for Fort Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, to reenlist.

"Sure, he was homesick for the army," the recruiting officer at the fort said later over the telephone. "We welcome him back."

WOULD BE SECOND TO NONE

James Shelley, Phoenix, Sent to West Point, Wishes to Be First-Class Officer.

President Harding has appointed another World war veteran to West Point. James Shelley of Phoenix, Ariz., told a "white lie" and at sixteen was enlisted as a regular in the army. He served nine months overseas with the artillery. He is now a "plebe" at the academy where after four years' hard work he will be graduated a second lieutenant.

The stuff that is Shelley's and which made him enlist when under age evidenced itself when he answered the telegram of West Point officials who asked: "What is your ambition?" Shelley had to make his answer in seven words, but it was to the point. He said: "I want to be second to none."

FOR LEGION POST IN KOREA

Application for Charter Is Made to the Legion's National Organization Department.

An application has just been received for a charter for an American Legion post in Korea by the Legion's national organization department in Indianapolis. There are 15 persons eligible for membership in Korea and the application bears the names of those 15 persons. The local post will have its headquarters at Kwangju, Chosen. The post in Korea is being organized by M. L. Swineheart, treasurer of the South Presbyterian mission in that country. In his letter accompanying the application for a charter, Mr. Swineheart said: "Please have the application acted upon as quickly as possible as we have good reason for wanting to get busy and get the post organized into a going concern."

It is unfortunate that some World war veterans in the United States where it is harder to stay out of the Legion than it is to get into it don't get some of this enthusiasm manifested by their erstwhile comrades in arms in far away Korea.

Carrying On With the American Legion

FARM ANIMALS

BLACK COLOR IS HEREDITARY

Feeding and Management of Sheep Have Nothing to Do With Appearance of Black Lambs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The appearance of black lambs in a flock made up entirely of white sheep has been for ages, and is still, a cause for wonder and the feeds of superstitions. But the study of the laws of breeding and heredity has explained the reasons for the sporadic appearance of these off-color specimens. In a letter to a farmer who reported 25 black lambs from a flock of 175 purebred Shropshire ewes, all white, and who considered certain feeds the cause, the United States Department of Agriculture gives a clear statement of the principles involved.

Feeding and management of sheep, says Dr. Sewall Wright, specialist in animal genetics, have nothing to do with the appearance of black lambs. The black color is hereditary even though it may be transmitted by ordinary white sheep. The black color in such a case is what is called a recessive character. White sheep which transmit this character at all transmit black in 50 per cent of their reproductive cells (ova in the case of ewes and spermatozoa in the case of rams) and white in the remaining 50 per cent. Thus, such white sheep mated with blacks (which can only transmit black) produce 50 per cent black lambs and 50 per cent white. All of these white lambs can transmit black.

White sheep which transmit only white, mated with blacks, produce only white lambs, but all of these lambs can transmit black. When both ewe and ram are white, but both transmit black, about 25 per cent of the lambs are black, 50 per cent are white, which transmit black, while the remaining 25 per cent are true-breeding whites. In this case it is an even chance that a given ewe will transmit black and an even chance that it will be fertilized by a male cell which transmits black, making one chance in four that both transmit black, which is necessary for the production of a black lamb.

With 25 black lambs appearing in the flock, it is indicated that about 100 of the 175 ewes transmit black, assuming that all of the rams used transmit it. If not all the rams transmit this color then it is probable that an even larger number of ewes transmit it.

Department of Agriculture Bulletin 905, Principles of Live Stock Breeding, contains a detailed discussion of this problem. It may be obtained from the superintendent of public documents, Government printing office, Washington, D. C., for 15 cents.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

About twenty of the boy and girl friends of Jerry Malloy gathered at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Malloy on South Fourth street last evening and assisted Jerry to properly celebrate his 13th birthday. It was a real surprise to the guest of honor when the guests dropped in, but he had fully recovered by the time the ice cream arrived. A fine evening was the result.

Ten of her little girl friends helped Miss Catherine Schmitt to celebrate her ninth birthday at her home on Second street yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock. The little folks enjoyed themselves to the limit.

Mrs. Elmer Hickok and daughter Georgia of Curwensville were shopping in town today.

Bluebird a Friend of Man.

Like the robin, the bluebird is very domestic, but unlike the robin, it does not prey upon any cultivated product or work any injury whatsoever to the fruit grower. During the fruit season in fact five-sixths of its food consists of insects. It seems, therefore, that the common practice of encouraging the bluebird to nest near houses by placing convenient boxes in which it may build its home is thoroughly justified.

ENTERTAINED FOR FRIENDS

Messrs. John and Foster Wood gave a stag party at Goshen Camp last evening in honor of their boyhood friends, Messrs. McLarren and Shimmel, formerly of Boggs township, but now of Washington, D. C., who are visiting relatives and friends in this section at present. An excellent chicken dinner, with all the trimmings, was provided by Fred Wilson, John Herdman and Hobart Callahan, which was given closest and most satisfactory attention by the twenty-five guests present.

The guests of honor told a whole lot of John Wood's escapades in his "salad days" in the Blue Ball country, but John made us promise not to say anything about that end of it, and besides John is married now and it wouldn't be right to cast up.

It was a most delightful occasion, as all will testify who were fortunate enough to be present.

HELPED "OLD FELLOW" CELEBRATE

Harry Cochrane, one of the Third Ward's good citizens who is "wheeling along gracefully" toward the three score mark, was forced to pause long enough last evening to remember that he had reached Station 57 on life's journey, when just fifty-seven of his friends dropped in at his Merrill street home last evening to remind him of that fact. Great preparations had been made for the affair by Mr. Cochrane and a most enjoyable evening was the result and, as was to be expected, the guest of honor was the happiest person in the crowd. After partaking of delicious refreshments, the guests departed for their homes, expressing the hope that "old fellow" would be prepared to be present at many similar occasions.

WHY 50,000 CHILDREN WERE NOT PROMOTED

A prominent health officer recently stated that of 100,000 pupils of the New York City schools who failed to be promoted, fully half are held back by defective eyesight and not by lack of brains.

Give your children a fair chance to learn by allowing us to make sure that they can see well.
